Nation-Wide Phone Strike Threatens Bell System

Action Will Be Taken By End of February If Demands Are Not Met, CIO Unit Says

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The CIO Communications Workers of America yesterday notified the Bell Telephone System that 250,000 union employes would be in a position to strike next month to win higher wages and other benefits.

"A Nation-wide strike of telephone workers may occur by the end of February or before unless satisfactory pay boosts and other contract improvements are negotiated," the union announced.

CWA Vice President A. T. Jones said yesterday that six union units with 100,000 members have already fulfilled the requirements of the Taft-Hartley Act and are legally prepared to strike right away. Nineteen other divisions of CWA have taken steps to notify Bell companies of their desire to negotiate new contracts or reopen old ones, and take the legal steps necessary to permit them to strike at the end of February.

6300 Involved Locally

"We have notified all these 19 divisions to conduct immediate strike votes among their members. We are confident these votes will carry," Jones said.

In Washington, Division 36, with 3500 plant, accounting and commercial employes, and Division 50, with 2800 operators, filed bargaining notices with the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. on January 1. Both divisions have contracts which run into 1951 but permit reopening of the contracts for wages.

Similar notifications have been sent by Division 33, with 5500 employes; to Virginia C. & P. by Division 34, with 2700 plant employes, and to C. & P. of Baltimore City.

Maryland traffic employes and West Virginia C. & P. employes are not involved in the negotiations, inasmuch as their contracts cannot be reopened until a later date.

Bargaining for Months

CWA Vice President Jones said that the union was not making any specific demands on the telephone companies but was insisting on "a substantial wage increase, shorter apprentice periods and a shorter work week." He contended that the telephone workers have fallen from seventh to twenty-fifth place in average weekly earnings since 1939, and that it would take "just about 25 cents an hour" to restore phone workers to their former relative position.

Seven of the CWA divisions have been bargaining with Bell companies for several months now, Jones said, and have been getting nowhere, except in some instances

Stocks Exceed 3-Year High Level On Late Buying

New York, Jan. 4. (AP).—A last-hour surge of buying today lifted the stock market to the highest average level in more than three years.

The rise accompanied release of President Truman's State of the Union message.

Railroad stocks were particularly in demand.

Gains ranged from a few cents to as much as $2 or so a share.

At 71 degrees, Washington yesterday had its hottest January 4 on record.

This happy event was part of a remarkable turntable executed across the Nation by the thermometer, which appeared to forget which side of the continent was which.

In southern California, sub-freezing weather threatened the citrus crops, and in Sacramento, the State's capital, snow fell for the first time since 1932. In the mid-continent generally winter's worst cold wave cracked down on millions.

But along the usually frigid Eastern seaboard winter heat marks fell like tenpins in such cities as New York, Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia, Norfolk and Atlanta.

In Massachusetts a man picked spinach in his garden. In Newark, N. J., a restaurant advertised iced tea. Pittsburgh offices turned on electric fans.

For the Nation's Capital the mark of 71, coming at 1:55 p. m., shattered by 5 degrees a record made in 1874, when Ulysses S. Grant was President.

Also, it was a handsome 30 degrees above normal for the day, and somewhat more than that above the coldest January 4 on record—3 below zero in 1877. It was 6 degrees off the hottest January day on record—77 on January 15, 1932.

The wondrous weather, it was ex-

Britain Sends Troops, Warship To Halt Violence in Eritrea

London, Jan. 5 (Thursday) (AP).—Britain announced today she is sending troops and a warship to stop "repeated acts of murder and violence" in Italy's former Red Sea colony of Eritrea. The country has been administered by Britain since 1941.

[United Press quoted Greville Drew, chief administrator, as saying the first contingents of British troops arrived at Massaua, main port of Eritrea.]

Britain also has told Italy and Ethiopia she will take "a serious view of any action on the part of their representatives of a kind likely to provoke disturbance of the peace in the territory," a Foreign Office statement said.

Italians in Eritrea have been subjected to attacks and ambushes from the natives for months.

The statement said a "series of outrages" culminated on December 12 in "murderous attacks on the innocent citizens of Asmara itself." Asmara, capital city of 85,000, is 65 miles inland from Massaua. Fifty thousand of the population are Italians. About 6000 of Massaua's population of 17,000 are Italians.

These attacks, it was announced, were followed by a curfew, internment of suspects and suspension of the local press, which was declared to have made difficult the administration's maintenance of "law and order." A system of convoys was set up in rural areas November 18 in an effort to stop the ambushes.

An Admiralty spokesman said it is not known what warship will be sent to Massaua.

One of the several warships in the Red Sea area is the destroyer Chequers, on which the Duke of Edinburgh is first lieutenant. The duke is the husband of Princess Elizabeth. The destroyer Chevron also is in the Red Sea.

Eritrea, taken by Italy late in the last century, was the springboard for Mussolini's attack on Ethiopia in 1935. It has been in British hands since Mussolini's armies were driven out. A United

Rails' Coal Use Cut One-Third By ICC Order

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday sidetracked one-third of coal-burning passenger locomotives on all lines short of coal.

The slash in passenger service, effective at 11:59 Sunday night, is directed at all roads with less than 25 days' supply of locomotive fuel coal. Industry sources said that some 40 lines, including the Baltimore & Ohio, the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Southern Railway would be immediately affected.

The ICC directive, issued because of dwindling coal stocks, will run for two months.

Twice before, the ICC has taken action because of the growing coal shortage. In November, the ICC temporarily reduced passenger service with coal locomotives by 25 percent. Last week the ICC gave lines with less than nine days' stock of coal a top priority in the purchase of new coal supplies.

In another development yesterday, the "captive" coal mines, operated by the big steel companies, and the central Pennsylvania mine producers charged John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers with violating the Taft-Hartley Act through the three-day week and other allegedly illegal actions. The complaint, seeking immediate relief through injunction, was filed here with the National Labor Relations Board.

Similar charges of unfair labor practices have already been filed

U. S. of Indonesia Picks Dr. Sumitro As Charge Here

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—The United States of Indonesia office here announced today that Dr. D. Sumitro has been named Charge d'Affaires for the new nation in the United States.

He will be the highest ranking officer of his country in the United States until exchange of embassies between Washington and Jakarta is completed.

Dr. Sumitro has been stationed in New York several years, handling trade and finance matters for the republicans while they sought freedom from Holland. A Washington office under Sumitro will be headed by D. W. Rengers. E. C. Zimmerman, former resident commissioner of the Netherlands East Indies, will be special consultant

British Transport Weekly Loss Put At $1,400,000

London, Jan. 4 (AP).—Britain's state-owned transport system is running into the red at the rate of $1,400,000 every week, the transport commission said today.

By the end of 1950—after three years of state ownership—it predicted rising losses will total between 140 million dollars and 168 million dollars. The commission revealed the staggering bill before a tribunal hearing its application for higher rail freight rates.

Higher transport costs would in turn affect the price of coal, electricity, gas and consumer goods. The effect on the prices of export goods, on which Britain is depending for its economic comeback, still hasn't been gauged.

U. S. Considers British Plan For an 'Atomic Partnership'

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

State Department, Defense and Atomic Energy Commission officials conferred yesterday on a British memorandum outlining a proposed British-Canadian-United States "atomic partnership."

The essential feature of the proposal is that Great Britain would abandon previous plans for the manufacture of atomic bombs within its own borders. Its scientists, however, would work on weapons research and manufacture in the United States, and a certain number of American-made bombs would be stored in the British Isles.

The memorandum was presented to the United States as part of what a British Foreign Office spokesman described yesterday as the "second stage" of discussions of the proposed partnership.

The discusions have been held intermittently since last November. They are due to come to a climax when the proposals are considered by a top policy group of British, Canadian and United States officials. This may take place before the end of this month.

In the discussions, the Americans have pressed the British to give up plans for making their own atomic weapons, on grounds this would be a less-than-optimum use of scarce money, materials, atomic ore and scientific talent.

The new memorandum apparently concedes this point. But to protect British interests, the United Kingdom proposes that its scientists share fully, by transmission of United States information and by actual laboratory partici-

Vandenberg Okays China Policy Fight

By the United Press

The Chinese Nationalist government yesterday renewed its urgent appeal for American aid in defending Formosa and spelled out help it wants.

The Chinese Embassy delivered the request to the State Department as Congressional Republicans got a go-ahead signal from their foreign policy leader, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, for a gloves-off attack on the Administration's handling of the Chinese crisis.

Meanwhile it was revealed that Secretary of State Acheson will appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday at his own request, and informed sources said Acheson will reply in strong terms to GOP leaders, including former President Herbert Hoover, who have demanded United States military action to save Formosa from the Chinese Communists.

President Truman failed to mention China and the Communist threat to Formosa in his State of the Union message, and gave no hint what stand the Administration will take on the Nationalist bid for help.

Second Appeal for Aid

Meanwhile, the State Department again refused to acknowledge or deny that it had circulated a secret document advising its officials to prepare the public for writing off Formosa to the Communists.

The Nationalists formally requested U. S. aid December 23. Chinese Ambassador Wellington Koo sent a new memorandum to the State Department yesterday. Officials said it contained "further material" elaborating on the original aid request, but did not make public its contents.

It was understood the new ap[illegible] for about 30 million dollars in United States military aid, with emphasis on ammunition and replacement parts for American arms already supplied to China.

Koo was said to have assured the State Department his government was not asking this country to send United States troops or naval units for actual fighting in Formosa.

Foreign Aid Administrator Paul G. Hoffman disclosed that his Marshall recovery plan agency already is supplying economic aid to Formosa.

"Amazing," Says Vandenberg

He said United States-financed shipments of fertilizer for next spring's rice crop, and crude oil for processing in Formosa's refineries, have been going to the island steadily since the fall of the mainland to Red armies.

The agency still has about 94 million dollars earmarked for economic aid to Nationalist China, but it cannot be used after February 15 unless Congress amends the present foreign aid act.

Existence of the secret State Department document was disclosed this week in a United Press dispatch from Tokyo.

The department's press spokesman, Michael J. McDermott, refused to discuss the document, but said under questioning that any such paper would necessarily have had "complete" clearance of top policy officers before it was circulated.

Vandenberg termed the document "amazing" and told his GOP colleagues he will not seek to

Navy to Build No Ships, Cut Reserve

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Cutbacks in the 1950 and 1951 defense budgets, The Washington Post learns, have forced these major steps affecting the Navy's present and future readiness:

1. There will be no new warship construction provided for in the '51 budget, scheduled to go to Congress next week. This will be the first time since the 1920s that funds have not been proposed for laying down new ships, officials noted, except for a period after VJ-Day when the ways were clogged with wartime construction.

2. All repairs have been stopped on vessels in the Reserve Fleet and the program of overhauling ships in "mothballs" every five years has been abandoned.

3. Plans to reduce the size of the "mothball fleet" are under way and some of the laidup vessels undoubtedly will be scrapped or sold.

Some "Modernization"

The fact that the status of the Reserve Fleet is undergoing change was confirmed by Vice Admiral Robert B. Carney, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for logistics, in an interview. Information about the contemplated warship building "holiday" came from other but reliable sources.

While no new construction is planned, the 1951 budget does provide for the modernization of some existing ships and conversion of others. This largely involves, however, it is understood, a revamping of the program announced last year to two Essex-type aircraft carriers and other ships with funds saved from the cancellation of the 65,000-ton carrier United States.

Work on construction of new warships already started or appropriated for is expected to go forward under the 1951 budget, [illegible] request Secretary

Admiral Carney said that under the revised maintenance program for the Reserve Fleet, preservation work probably will continue unchanged. That is, the dehumidifying machines will be kept operating below decks and painting of topside structure will go on. Newly developed paints will enable the latter job to be done more cheaply, he said.

"Mothball Fleet" ships will continue to be drydocked for bottom-scraping but probably at longer intervals than before, Carney added. Original postwar plans to keep at least the major ships in the Reserve Fleet modernized by improvements when overhauled were abandoned earlier, and the current decision will mean that the reserve craft will have to be commissioned in an emergency "almost as is," the admiral stated.

Four-Facet Problems

Carney explained the problem of reducing the size of the Reserve Fleet—now numbering 2263 ships of all types—is being approached from four angles in the current survey:

1. The Board of Inspection and Survey is now looking at all the vessels of the fleet to determine what vessels may have deterioated so much as not to be worth keeping. While this is a regular function of the board, the present special survey is expected to bring recommendations for the elimination of some "borderline cases."

2. All vessels which have been declared surplus to United States

Truman Mildly Asks More Revenue, Calls Again for Fair Deal

Message Contains No New Projects; 23 Old Ones Given To Congress Again

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

President Truman, appearing at the Capitol for the first time in a nondefiant, conciliatory role, yesterday handed Congress a 5000-word catalogue of Fair Deal aims.

Not a single really new project was added to the list he submitted to the same Congress just one year ago. But there was a marked change in the tone of the once-crusading zealot for the drooping New Deal.

Congress, applauding his Fair Deal recapitulation 38 separate times, sensed the change. Democratic leaders commended the shift in pace, said the President was now trying to work with the legislative branch he once bitterly fought with his back to the wall.

Even the GOP Is Mild

Even old guard Republicans, who guffawed and even booed at one Truman thrust, found it hard to work up any real indignation over the President's defense of a program "which necessarily requires large expenditures of funds."

Mr. Truman pulled few punches, but completely lacking was the scolding urgency with which he formerly charged Congress to pass unenacted portions of his Fair Deal.

In all, 24 separate legislative recommendations, almost lost in his 35-minute address to the joint session, were handed back to Congress for another look.

On the red-hot issue of taxes, he yielded just a little, asking Congress merely for changes which "will reduce present inequities, stimulate business activity, and yield a moderate amount of additional revenue."

But on the equally focal subject of spending he yielded not at all. Shooting for a trillion-dollar economy in the next 50 years, he warned against "the folly of attempting budget slashes which would impair our prospects for peace or cripple the programs essential to our national strength."

Resubmits "Point Four"

In the foreign field, he promised "we will not fail" the nations now counting on our economic and military aid. He resubmitted "Point Four" and other unenacted foreign programs, but failed to unveil any new policy in China or the Far East.

In this field he made his most conciliatory gesture to Republicans in this ad-libbed aside:

"Right here I want to say that no one appreciates more than I the bipartisan cooperation in for-

PRESIDENT HARRY S. TRUMAN
Shakes his finger at Republican members of Congress

Hoots and Derisive Laughter By GOP Greet Truman Jab

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman needled the Republicans just once yesterday, and it was a mild jab at that. The result was a rumble of hoots and laughter, good natured for the most part, which seemed to say: "Harry, what a gall!"

The outburst, which enlivened an otherwise unexciting ceremony, came about 35 minutes after House Doorkeeper William (Fishbait) Miller had announced Mr. Truman's arrival.

In this period, the Democrats broke in many times to applaud Mr. Truman as he delivered his State of the Union message.

The Republicans, as the theater people would say, were sitting on their hands.

Then the Chief Executive moved onto controversial ground—fiscal policy.

"At present," he said, "largely because of the ill-considered tax reduction of the Eightieth Congress, the Government is not receiving enough revenue to meet its necessary expenditures."

The Republicans, who controlled the Eightieth Congress and who now put the blame for the deficit on Administration spending, suddenly came to life. Laughter.

U. S. Asks Billion Cut in ERP Aid Requests

NYHT News Service

The United States has asked the nations in the European Recovery Program to keep their new requests for Marshall Plan aid about one billion dollars below the total of their current allotments, it was announced yesterday.

Each of the participating nations, except Greece, where recovery has been slow, has been asked to make an across-the-board cut of 25 percent in its requests.

This action, announced by Richard M. Bissell, jr., assistant deputy economic cooperation administrator, coincides with insistent demands for a cut in foreign aid now being made by members of Congress for both parties.

Message Backs Home Rule For District

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday made a new appeal for passage of District home-rule legislation.

The President listed home-rule for the District in a paragraph of his State of the Union message dealing with civil rights measures. The paragraph was greeted by three sprinklings of applause from the joint session of Congress. One spurt of applause followed directly the mention of District home-rule.

House members for and against the home-rule plan indicated their belief the President's new call for home rule would be insufficient in itself to break the blockade now impeding the home-rule measure. The Senate has approved, and the House District Committee has

Huge Hyena Slain By Hunters After Killing 8 Children

New Delhi, India, Jan. 4. (U.P.). Two hunters have bagged a giant hyena which reportedly had killed at least eight children and terrorized the United Provinces village of Murpur for months, it was reported today.

Packs of blood-thirsty hyenas have eaten an estimated 100 children in the United Provinces since they started raiding farmhouses there last summer, but this was the first time one of the elusive animals was reported killed.

New Model of B-36 Now Being Tested; Is World 'Spotter'

New York, Jan. 4 (NYHT).—A new model of the Air Force's giant B-36 bomber built to carry out aerial reconnaissance and photo-intelligence work over any area in the world from bases in North America is being flight-tested at the present time, it was learned today.

It is known that outstanding air strategists have been clamoring for development of an airplane with the capability of pin-pointing plants deep in Soviet Russia suspected of producing atom bombs. The huge fuselage of the B-36, which indisputably has the longest range of any bomber in existence, will permit installation of large cameras and electronic equipment.

Engineers disclosed yesterday that the new plane would carry the same defensive armament against enemy fighters as the bomber—16 20-millimeter cannon.

U. S. Advised, Report Says

Britain Held Set to Recognize Red China Friday or Saturday

London, Jan. 4 (AP).—Britain plans to recognize Communist China Friday or Saturday and has so notified the United States, an informed source said today.

Outside the Communist sphere, only Burma and India thus far have given the diplomatic nod to Mao Tze-tung's Peiping regime. They acted in December.

Britain's decision, the informant said, actually was made weeks ago. The timing of recognition was reported to have been settled before British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin left London December 27 for the Conference of Commonwealth Foreign Ministers opening January 9 at Colombo, Ceylon.

A major aim of Britain's Labor Government is to protect investments of about $1 billion in businesses, schools and churches in China and maintain trade relations with the Chinese.

The decision marks one of the few major breaks in the cooperation of London and Washington since the end of World War II.

Pakistan Recognizes Communist China

Karachi, Pakistan, Jan. 4 (AP).—Pakistan today recognized the Communist government of China.

The recognition announced by the Karachi government was de jure, or full recognition of the people's republic of China set up under Communist leader Mao Tze-tung.

British Refuse to Allow U. S. Inspection of Planes

Hongkong, Jan. 4 (AP).—British officials today refused to allow American officials to inspect 75 planes belonging to China's two largest airlines which retired United States Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault claims to have bought.

Two American Civil Aeronautics Administration officials, Rex Carpenter and Claude Assex, sought to inspect the planes for serviceability in the event they are turned over to the American Civil Air Transport, Inc., owned by Chennault.

Max Oxford, acting director of civil aviation for Hongkong, told the Americans he would need an order from the Hongkong government before he could allow inspection of the planes.

William (Wild Bill) Donovan, New York lawyer, asked both the attorney general's office and Hongkong Gov. Alexander Grantham for the order for inspection without success.

Donovan charged the pro-Communist employes of the two airlines are sabotaging the planes by removing key parts.

Democrats React Cautiously To Truman Plea for New Taxes

Republican cries against "socialism" and new taxes greeted President Truman's message to Congress on the State of the Union yesterday.

Democratic supoprters praised the President; they said he pointed the way to lasting peace and mounting prosperity.

But Democrats in general reacted cautiously to Mr. Truman's request for a "moderate amount" of new taxes. Democratic tax leaders called for cuts in spending. Southern Democrats balked, as expected, at the President's civil rights program.

With prepared statements and verbal comments to reporters, members of Congress gave a preview of battles to come in the new session and at the polls next fall.

Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) said "the message was forthright and comprehensive. In regard to international affairs, it revealed a determination to keep the United States in the forefront in the world-wide effort to stem the expansion of communism. In the domestic field it is to be hoped that this portion of the message will be followed by prompt action upon specific proposals for reduction of Government spending, for a balanced budget, and for a decrease in taxation."

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) called it "a very comprehensive message."

More than 100 House Republicans signed a statement by Representative Martin (Mass.), their party leader, declaring the United States is being "taxed into socialism."

"In the broadest view," this statement said, "the President has again given notice that he is wholly committed to the eventual socialis-

AEC Security Survey Group Is Completed

Appointment of Dr. Paul E. Klopsteg of Northwestern University, and David Luke Hopkins, a Baltimore, Md., banker, to the security survey panel of the Atomic Energy Commission was announced yesterday.

Dr. Klopsteg is director of research at Northwestern's technological institute. Hopkins also is president of the board of trustees of John Hopkins University.

Carroll L. Wilson, AEC general manager, said their appointments complete the membership of the panel. Other members are John S. Bugas, chairman, and J. Arthur Mullin, both of Detroit.

pation here, in weapons development.

Meantime, they offer reciprocally all their scientific information on the subject to the American atomic weaponeers.

The memorandum also provides that the British would continue to do some experimentation and research on atomic weapons in their own country, although no actual production.

American officials refused detailed comment on the memorandum, the outlines of which were published yesterday by the New York Times. But the impression was gained that it provided a hopeful basis for ultimate agreement.

It was difficult to see wherein the proposals differed in any marked degree from those that had been set forth by American representatives in the three-power talks during December. It appeared that the memorandum had, however, tied up in satisfactory form a number of details hitherto left dangling.

Regardless of whether the Administration does or does not have legal authority to enter into any such agreement with the British and Canadians, Mr. Truman, the State Department and the AEC have promised Congress to enter into no commitments of this nature without prior consultation with Congress.

Thus, it is expected that when agreement is reached, the whole matter will be discussed with the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy. Ultimately, it is probable that new legislation will be required to carry out the agreement. The present atomic law is subject to dispute on whether it permits the United States to share classified atomic information with other countries.

Also, a profound question is raised on the storing of American bombs outside United States borders. It would require the formation of a basic decision in military policy.

Further, it provokes questions relating to the three nations' relations with their other partners in the North Atlantic Pact, on whether the bomb is a weapon for the common defense of all, and to be considered as other conventional weapons, or whether it remains apart, in a special category.

Photographs Of Stars Now Aid Air Maps

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 4 (AP).—The Air Force has developed an aerial camera that takes pictures of the sky, rather than the ground.

It's called a zenith camera and it's operated as nearly vertical as is humanly possible to adjust. The camera can be operated only in twilight or in darkness.

With it untrained men can pinpoint an exact location on land by coordinating the position of stars with the spot at which the picture was taken. The end product of the photography—plus some mathematical gymnastics—is the establishment of an accurately known control point on the earth's surface. This point, with at least one other, can be used in making aeronautical charts from aerial photographs.

Aerial photographers are not absolutely accurate when it comes to pin-pointing a specific site on the ground. The movement of the plane through the air varies slightly and at high altitudes a slight error may mean one of a mile or more on the ground.

Officials Ponder Sites for Fringe Parking Revival

District officials have been considering sites for a possible revival of the fringe parking plan to keep c.rs out of crowded downtown Washington.

Sites looked over this weekend by Motor Vehicle Parking Agency Chairman Charles M. Upham and other officials included: Property at 27th and G sts. nw., near the Whitehurst freeway; Temple Heights, at Connecticut and Florida aves. nw.; several sites on S. Capitol st. on the downtown side of the bridge; the square bounded by N, O, 1st and 2d sts. ne.

Upham said the quetsion of giving fringe parking another try will be discussed at the agency's meeting January 20.

Horsewoman Hurt When Mount Crashes Car; Injured Animal Bolts, Is Shot to Death

Park Police Sergt. Wiliam Lasham shoots injured horse with his .38 caliber service revolver

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

Mrs. Vivian McClain, injured when knocked from a horse, is treated in Emergency Hospital by Dr. Veronica Troost

A horsewoman was thrown 25 feet and injured about the head just after dark last night when her mount collided and became entangled with an automobile. The accident occurred at P st. nw., and Rock Creek pkwy. at the evening rush hour.

The victim was Mrs. Vivian McClain, 37, of 3236 Walbridge pl. nw., counsellor in the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics.

Driver of the car, according to police, was Talcott W. Seelye, 27, of 1703 21st st. nw. He is a foreign service student in the employ of the State Department.

Motorist's Account

Seelye told police he was leaving the parkway to turn into P st. when he saw two horsewomen approaching the P st. junction on the bridle path which parallels the parkway. He said he stepped on the gas to cross in front of them, but heard an impact with the rear of his car.

He said he stopped immediately and saw the horse's foreleg entangled with his rear bumper. Then, he said, he saw the rider lying 25 feet away, unconscious.

Mrs. McClain was admitted to Emergency Hospital with concussion and severe lacerations about the head.

Policeman Shoots Horse

In the meantime, Sergt. William R. Lashan of Park police arrived. He said he saw the horse, named "Peanut," had extricated his foot from the car bumper but that the foot was almost completely severed. The horse was limping north toward the Massachusetts ave. entrance to the parkway.

Sergeant Lashan fired six shots from his own revolver and one from the gun of a fellow officer before he killed the suffering and fleeing animal. Officers said all the shots took effect in the horse's head.

Riding with Mrs. McClain, who was reported to be a veteran horsewoman, was Miss Ana Ireland, 2123 I st. nw., also a Navy employe. She told officers that her horse shied violently when the accident occurred, then tried to throw her and run. She said she finally fought her mount under control, but had no chance to see details of the accident.

The animals, police said, belong to the Edgewater Riding Academy, 2514 G st. nw.

No New Ships in Navy Budget; 'Mothball Fleet' Costs Cut

Navy needs but have been held for possible transfer under the military aid programs will be disposed of, either by transfer or scrapping.

3. What ships would require such extensive moderization in an emergency as to make it uneconomical under war pressure to devote scarce men and materials to the job.

4. In the light of recent revisions of strategic plans can any types of ships be scrapped?

Admiral Carney would not elaborate on the latter point, but it is possible that the survey may conclude that 15 of the battleships now in "mothballs" might be eliminated. The Reserve Fleet contains such old battlewagons as the California, Tennessee, Colorado, Maryland and West Virginia.

May Reduce Jeep Carriers

Or possibly scaling down the number of "jeep" carriers in reserve. There are now 59 of the CVEs in "mothballs"—no longer of much use except for plane ferrying in the opinion of many officers.

The Reserve Fleet also includes 20 attack carriers (CVs), five light flattops (CVLs), 15 heavy cruisers, 37 light or antiaircraft cruisers, 187 destroyers, 251 destroyer escorts and 88 submarines.

The naval officials consider it would be pennywise and pound-foolish to cut the Reserve Fleet of anything but obvious deadwood. Replacement value of the "mothball" vessels is estimated at 23 billion dollars, while their maintenance costs only 6/100s of 1 percent of this sum, studies show.

Cost of maintaining the Reserve Fleet last year was $32,200,000, not including pay of military personnel maintaining it. This has been more than cut in half for 1951, it is understood. Nine hundred-odd officers and 14,000 enlisted men man the fleet.

Law Curbs Scrapping

One obstacle in the way of scrapping reserve vessels is an old law which bars such action unless each ship is unfit for further use." On the lawbooks, also, is an Attorney General's decision informing the Secretary of the Navy that he could not scrap an ancient cruiser because it would make an excellent floating barracks.

Some officers feel a change in the law may be necessary to permit any substantial reduction of the Reserve Fleet—if such is finally decided. Others, however, hold that a more liberal interpretation of the law is likely in the light of current circumstances.

The 2000-odd ships of the fleet are tied up at Boston, New London, Bayonne, N. J., Philadelphia, Norfolk, Charleston, Green Cove Springs, Fla., Orange, Tex., San Diego, Long Beach, San Francisco Bay, in the Columbia River and Puget Sound.

New Jersey Town To Be Sold to Its 700 Families

Winfield, N. J., Jan 4 (AP).—Seven hundred families are going to buy this war-born community in industrial north Jersey at a cost of less than $2000 each.

The township's board of trustees was authorized today to accept the Government's offer to sell the community to its citizens for $1,350,000 on a 45-year mortgage.

Winfield's 110 acres and 700 one, two, three and four family frame houses was set up by the Federal Housing Authority in 1941 to house workers thronging to booming war industries.

The tenants have been leasing their homes from the Federal Government at an average of $30.50 per month.

Policeman's Auto Plows Into Crowd at Car Stop

Detroit, Jan. 4 (AP).—A policeman's car plowed into an open safety zone here today scattering like bowling pins a score of men and women waiting for a streetcar.

Thirteen persons were injured, one seriously.

Jail Ends B-B Gunners' Open Season on Women

Los Angeles, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—A judge dispensed stern justice today to two young hunters who made it open season on women on Hollywood blvd.

Warning them that retreating females were illegal game at any season, Judge William M. Byrne sentenced Robert Ross, 20, and Theodore Gustaveson, 20, to pay $25 fines and spend a weekend in jail and a year on probation.

They pleaded guilty to two nights of target practice on Hollywood blvd., with a B-B gun, using women in slacks as the targets. Mrs. Kathleen O'Connor and Miss Shirley Weinburg registered complaints.

Britain's Reserves Rise by 263 Millions

London, Jan. 4 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps announced today Britain's vital gold-dollar reserves jumped $263,000,000 in the last quarter of 1949. In the same period, the dollar deficit of the area plunged from a quarterly rate of $539,000,000 to only $31,000,000.

This is $348,000,000 above the dangerous low point of last September, just before the pound was cheapened from $4.03 to $2.80.

The reserves now stand at $1,688,000,000, the Chancellor of the Exchequer told a news conference. This is still well below what the treasury considers a safe minimum—two billion dollars.

Cripps cited these reasons for the increase:

A flow of dollars from importers of British goods who had held up payment until the pound was devalued.

Release of a backlog of orders from importers who had anticipated a cheaper pound.

Wafdists Win Easily In Egypt

MUSTAFA NAHAS PASHA
Wafdist party head

Cairo, Jan. 5. (AP).—The Wafdist party came within one vote today of an absolute majority in Parliament in returns from Egypt's first general election since the Palestine war.

Elections officials gave the party of peasant-born Mustafa el Nahas Pasha 159 seats in the 319-member Parliament. The Wafdists claimed an absolute majority in Tuesday's voting, saying eight independent members already elected have switched over to membership in the Wafdist party.

Foreign and diplomatic circles were amazed at the extent of the Wafdist victory over the once dominant Saadist party of former Premier Ibrahim Abdel Hadi Pasha.

The Wafdists are a strongly nationalist party which boycotted the parliamentary election of 1945. They are considered mildly reformist and pro-Western.

Returns are awaited from 47 districts. In 38 districts runoff elections will be held next Tuesday because they did not return an absolute majority.

Doctor Indicted In Mercy Death May Lose License

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 4 (AP).—Dr. Hermann N. Sander, 40, who must answer Thursday an indictment charging first-degree murder under the mercy death of an incurable cancer patient, tonight was threatened with loss of his right to practice medicine in New Hampshire.

Dr. John S. Wheeler, secretary of the State Board of Registration in Medicine, said that group would meet "within 36 to 48 hours" to determine whether Dr. Sander's license should be revoked.

Dr. Sander told reporters earlier today that he was temporarily turning over his practice to physician friends. He added he hadn't slept in four nights.

2 Flee Purge In Red Berlin, 2 Disappear

Berlin, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Two east German liberal democratic leaders have fled to western Berlin, another has been arrested and a fourth has disappeared in a growing purge of Soviet zone non-Communist parties, it was reported today.

Willy Hein and Helena Orthmann reportedly arrived in western Berlin yesterday. Franz Priefert was arrested Monday and Hans Baumann disappeared last week, it was said.

The four were suspended December 28 by the Communist-dominated party leadership in Berlin "for anti-Soviet activities."

W. Germans Want Safety Guaranteed

Bonn, Germany, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Speaking cautiously, west German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer warned the western Allies today they must guarantee this new republic security if they will not let the Germans rearm.

Adenauer's guarded statement came at a press conference, when he was asked: "Does the Federal government favor a security guarantee for the Federal republic?"

"Don't you favor it yourself?" he joked. Then, in serious tone, he added this description of his people:

"Forty-eight millions (Germans in western Germany) in a field of tension with Soviet Russia and her satellites on the one side and the western Allies on the other, without any guarantee for Germans that we will not be drawn into the whirlpool."

He refused to elaborate. But his meaning was clear. Two weeks ago Adenauer asked the three Allied high commissioners what plans the West has for defending western Germany against attack. Today's statement made it plain he has received no nswer.

Philippines Rebels Given Amnesty

Manila, Philippines, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Both houses of congress today approved a resolution approving a proclamation by President Elpidio Quirino which gives amnesty to "General" Francisco Medrano and his followers who rebelled recently in Batangas Province.

The President said earlier that the question of the amnesty and price controls may delay for several days his departure for the United States, where he is scheduled to undergo an operation.

The amnesty appeared certain to be approved by the Congress, which is meeting in special session.

Quirino had planned to fly to the United States Thursday for an operation for the removal of a kidney stone at Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore, Md. He said this morning that the issues before Congress, however, may force him to remain here until Saturday.

The text of the amnesty proclamation was not published, but informed sources said it did not excuse murder, kidnaping or similar crimes committed by the rebels during the brief but bloody November revolt.

"General" Francisco Medrano, leader of the revolt, surrendered Tuesday.

Stalin at 70 Slips Up On Attlee's Birthday

London, Jan. 4 (AP).—Prime Minister Stalin thanked Prime Minister Attlee today for wishing him a happy birthday.

Attlee cabled congratulations when Stalin turned 70 December 21.

"I ask you to accept my thanks for your greetings and good wishes," Stalin replied today.

His message overlooked one point: Attlee himself had a birthday yesterday. He was 67.

Shanghai Ship Crew Asks for Naval Guard

Hongkong, Jan. 4 (AP).—The United States State Department was asked by 29 American crewmen today to arrange naval protection for the Shanghai-bound freighter Flying Arrow or to authorize their release from contract.

They also asked the department to arrange repatriation of any United States seaman who leaves the ship rather than sail for the mined Communist-held port.

The United States consulate informed the crewmen the department already had authorized their signing off the ship, scheduled to sail for Shanghai Thursday. The consulate offered to arrange loans to finance return of the crewmen to the United States.

The Flying Arrow would risk the gunfire of Chinese Nationalist gunboats blockading Shanghai waters in addition to mines the Chinese claim to have laid in the Yangtze River estuary.

As the sailing hour drew near for the Flying Arrow, four National Maritime Union delegates aboard another Isbrandtsen Line ship, the Brooklyn Heights, inquired as to the possibility of crewmen aboard that vessel taking similar action to those aboard the Flying Arrow.

Britain Sends Troops, Ship

Nations decision on final disposition of the colony is pending.

Ethiopia, in hearings before the U. N., claimed the country with its 670 miles of coast line and 600,000 population. Most members of the U. N. supported the idea of giving part of it back to land-locked Ethiopia so she could have an outlet to the sea, but deferred decision for a year while a five-nation commission makes a further investigation.

British authorities in Eritrea announced they have recruited a substantial number of men to reinforce the police and have provided additional vehicles and radio facilities to give law enforcement authorities greater mobility and striking power.

At the same time the Ethiopian Embassy here made public a telegram to U.N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie from Acting Foreign Minister Afgeres in Addis Ababa refusing to recognize the General Assembly's decision to put Italian Somaliland under Italian trusteeship for 10 years. The Assembly voted to defer giving Somaliland independence until 1959.

The Ethiopian message said the Assembly decision contradicted the peace treaty for Italy, in which Italy renounced claim to all her former colonies.

Italy Asks U. N. Approval For Somaliland Bases

Lake Success, N. Y., Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Italy today sought United Nations authorization to build military bases in Somaliland.

At the same time, Ethiopia announced its refusal to recognize the U. N. decision granting Italy 10-year trusteeship over Somaliland.

Haile Selassie's kingdom, first victim of Italian Fascist aggression, cabled U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie it was considering a request to the International Court on legality of the General Assembly decision regarding Somaliland.

Czech Newlyweds Lose State Gifts by Haste

Prague, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Catholics who married in December to beat the January 1 Communist-sponsored law making civil marriages compulsory will not get any of the extra blankets and sheets the government is awarding January honeymooners.

The official Communist newspaper Rude Pravo said today there was "a great increase" in December weddings, but attributed it to "reactionary gossips" who said church weddings wouldn't be allowed under the new marriage law. The paper pointed out anyone can have a church wedding—provided it follows a civil one.

Vandenberg Approves Attack On Truman's China Policy

shield the Administration's policy from party attacks.

He said China never has been included in the bipartisan policy applied to Europe, and that he seldom has been consulted on Administration decisions in Far Eastern affairs.

Representative Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.), ranking Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, yesterday threw his weight behind the GOP clamor for United States military occupation of Formosa.

He said the island, lying athwart the sea lanes from Japan to the Philippines, has "tremendous" strategic value and "we ought not turn it over to the Communists."

Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, predicted that GOP members will lose no time in broadening their already-launched election year attack on Mr. Truman's Chinese policies.

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.,) said he was disappointed Mr. Truman did not mention China in his message yesterday, but realized it might have "embarrassed" the Administration to do so.

Senate GOP Floor Leader Kenneth S. Wherry said Mr. Truman's "woeful silence" about the Chinese situation indicates he is "determined to go forward with his blundering policies that please the Communists."

U. S. to Use Philippines As Base, China Reds Say

Hongkong, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—The Chinese Communist radio at Peking today asserted that the United States will help the Nationalists defend Formosa by "utilizing the Philippine Islands as a military base."

The Peking radio also issued a call to millions of Chinese living in Malaya, Indonesia, the Philippines, Viet Nam, Siam and Australia to rally to the "democratic, united front" under the Red flag.

The broadcast said a secret conference had taken place at Baguio, Philippines summer capital, recently among Myron M. Cowen, United States Ambassador to the Philippines, President Elpidio Quirino, and Chen Chiping, the Chinese Ambassador.

Before the conference Cowen met with the Far East Air Force Commander Gen. George Stratemeyer and Gen. Charles Willoughby, who is General MacArthur's intelligence chief, the broadcast said. However, it had no details of the alleged Philippines-Formosa axis.

The call for the Chinese in southeast Asia and Australia to unite came from Miss Ho Hsiang-ning, director of the Peking government's overseas affairs commission.

Chiang Back to Grapple With Defense Crisis

Taipeh, Formosa, Jan. 4 (AP).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek returned from a holiday vacation today faced with the pressing problem of saving Formosa and Hainan islands from the Reds.

Back from nearly two weeks at the Formosa Sun and Moon Lake, Chiang was expected to plunge into important conferences immediately. Most pressing problem facing him is reorganization and unification of the command of Nationalist forces on Formosa and Hainan—the two main Chinese islands still in Nationalist hands.

The situation on Hainan Island was reported grave in the face of imminent Communist onslaught from Liuchow peninsula.

Russia Helping to Mass Ships, Nationalists Say

Taipeh, Formosa, Jan. 4 (AP).—Nationalist naval sources today asserted China's Communists with Russian help were massing ships for the invasion of Formosa.

The sources also said units of the Soviet Asiatic fleet recently arrived at Dairen. Twenty Russian submarines were reported based at that Russian-held port in Manchuria.

(The arrival of Russian warships at Dairen is not unusual. Dairen is ice free. That makes it a good harbor in winter. Russian warships have been reported berthed there in winter in the past. Apparently it is the timing which has the Nationalist navy jittery.)

Jessup and MacArthur To Confer on Formosa

Yokohama (Thursday), Jan. 4 (AP).—United States Ambassador Philip C. Jessup said today he will discuss Formosa with General MacArthur. He would not comment on reports that the State Department expects the island to fall to the Chinese Communists.

Jessup and his wife arrived on a Far East survey which will include a visit to Formosa, refuge of the Chinese Nationalist government. He will attend a conference of American diplomatic officials at Bangkok, Thailand (Siam) next month.

The Ambassador said his Asiatic trip and the February visit to Japan of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff are "merely particular aspects" of continued American interest in the Far East.

Bidault Loses In 2 Debates On Labor Bill

Paris, Jan. 4 (U.P.). — Premier George Bidault's coalition government suffered two stinging defeats during National Assembly debate on a bill to restore free collective bargaining on the French labor front.

The assembly rejected, 417 to 176, a government-sponsored amendment for compulsory arbitration in labor disputes.

Earlier, the legislators had turned down another government amendment to make conciliation obligatory before a strike or lockout could be called. The vote was 283 to 156.

The fate of the government was not at stake in either vote. Bidault rather than risk a crisis, declined yesterday not to make an issue of the matter and left legislators free to vote as they wished.

Opposition in both cases was led by the Socialists, who are members of Bidault's coalition cabinet. They maintained the amendments would interfere with the right of labor to strike.

They were the first legislative defeats for the Bidault government since the Assembly slapped it down four times in one day during the budget debate two weeks ago.

D. C. Rent Law Tied Loosely to U. S. Setup

On Building Plan

Langer Asks For Soldiers' Home Inquiry

Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) yesterday called for an investigation of the Budget Bureau's refusal to permit Soldiers Home to launch a building program.

He filed in the Senate a resolution adopted by members of Soldiers Home at a mass meeting on December 31, which protested:

1. The Budget Bureau's failure to grant the House authority to use part of its reported 36-million-dollar trust fund for building additional quarters;

2. Recent "cuts in our rations from 74 cents to 61 cents," pointing out that "we know the enlisted men of the regular Army who pay for rations do not want members of the home underfed."

3. The fact the Budget Bureau has not approved any building appropriations in the Home's annual budget requests since 1948.

The bureau previously has held that shortage of building materials was the reason for rejecting expansion demands.

The resolution was referred to the Senate Armed Services Committee. Langer said he would push for a thorough inquiry into the complaints.

Truman to See Newsmen

President Truman will hold a news conference at 10:30 a. m. today.

The fate of District rent control after June 30 will be tied to the Federal program, but not unalterably so. Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) said yesterday after hearing President Truman call for Federal extension.

Harris, who heads the House District Judiciary Subcommittee which will handle local rent control legislation, said his group will "pay close attention to Federal action."

But then he added if Federal rent control "goes off it does not mean that the District control will also go. It will stand on its own merits."

His final word was that the "situation here would probably not be too different from other cities of the same size."

On the other hand, Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.), member of the House District Committee, said he plans to introduce a bill next week for a one-year extension of controls here.

Rent Administrator Robert G. Cogswell said there was still need for another year of rent control. He said the demand for apartments and houses in the $40 to $72.50 a month bracket continues high and new housing rents are running much higher.

"The situation is very tight on reasonable rentals," Cogswell declared.

The District operates under a separate rent act which runs out June 30, the same date as the Federal one.

4 Posts Created At White Oak Lab

Four new positions have been created at the Navy Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak, Md., in an expansion move.

Dr. John H. Sachs has been named deputy technical director; Donald Marlowe has been promoted to a new post of assistant to the technical director; Dr. Raymond J. Seeger will head a newly created second research department, and Lyman C. Fisher will direct a second engineering department.

The appointments were made by Rear Admiral Frank E. Beatti, commander of the installation, and Dr. Ralph D. Bennett, technical director.

Wards Take Train For Michigan, Due Here Later

San Francisco, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Consul General Angus Ward and his wife left by train today for Allegan, Mich., to visit relatives.

Ward, after a short stay in Michigan, then will go to Washington to report on his year's detention by Chinese Communists at Mukden.

The couple left aboard a Santa Fe train due in Chicago at 7:30 a. m. (CST) Saturday. They plan to visit Ward's brother at Allegan.

tabled, the home-rule legislation. Its supporers are now seeking signatures of 218 House members for a petition that would take the bill out of committee and present it to a vote of the House. Some 60 members have signed.

President Truman said those for and against the home rule and other measures should let the bills come to a vote.

"As we go forward in achieving greater economic security and greater opportunity for all our people, we should make every effort to extend the benefits of our democratic institutions," said Mr. Truman.

Supports Two Statehood Pleas

"The religious ideals which we profess and the heritage of freedom which we have received from the past., clearly place that duty upon us.

"I again urge the Congress to enact the civil rights proposals I made in February, 1948. These are proposals for the enactment of Federal statutes which will protect all our people in the exercise of their democratic rights and their search for economic opportunity, grant Statehood to Alaska and Hawaii, provide a greater measure of self-government for our island possessions, and accord home rule to the District of Columbia.

"Some of those proposals have been before the Congress for a long time. Those who oppose them, as well as those who favor them, should recognize that it is the duty of the elected representatives of the people to let these proposals come to a vote."

Puts It Up to Democrats

Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), a leading House sponsor of District home rule, said after hearing the message, "I certainly hope the Democratic leadership will respond to the President's request for District home rule."

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.), a member of the House District Committee, said he felt the President was right about bringing the home-rule bill to a House vote. At the same time, Representative Miller said he believed the current lobbying drive of Washington groups for support of the discharge petition would backfire. He said it was the Republican 80th Congress that tried to pass a Washington home-rule bill, and blamed Democrats for blocking it then. He added he would not sign the discharge petition.

Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.), chairman of the House District Judiciary Subcommittee and a leader in the current House District Committee majority against the Senate-approved home-rule bill, said there was nothing new in the President's home-rule comment. He emphasized, however, that the President had listed home-rule among civil-rights measures.

GOP Hoots Greet Truman Jab at Tax Cut

long drawn-out "Ohs," jeers and some boos arose from their ranks.

Mr. Truman paused, grinned, and then continued:

"To meet this situation," he said, "I am proposing that Federal expenditures be held to the lowest levels——"

Here the Republicans interrupted again with their derisive laughter and hooting. The Democrats, at the same time, cheered and clapped their hands.

So He Reads It Again

The President, standing at the dais against a background made up of the Flag and portraits of Washington and Lafayette, joined in the laughter.

"I think I had better read that over," he said, finally, "you interrupted me.

"To meet this situation, I am proposing that Federal expenditures be held to the lowest levels consistent with our international requirements and the essential needs of economic growth and the well-being of our people."

He looked up from his manuscript, waved a finger at the Republicans, and said: "Don't forget that last phrase."

On his way out of the Capitol, just before the trip back to the White House, Mr. Truman was confronted by a reporter.

"How was it, Mr. President?" the reporter asked.

"Fine," Mr. Truman said, smiling. "I had a grand reception. Couldn't be nicer, couldn't be nicer."

Puzzling for Foreigners

Some of the foreign diplomats who were in the House chamber must have been puzzled, if not astounded, by the GOP demonstration. The dean of the corps, Ambassador Wilhelm de Morgenstierne of Norway, would have understood it and enjoyed it, being thoroughly familiar with American politics. So would Ambassador Henri Bonnet of France. What Russian Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin thought about it all was something else.

President Truman drove from the White House to the Capitol with two of his secretaries, Matthew J. Conelly and Charles G. Ross. Constitution ave. was almost deserted as the motorcade swept by. Not until Capitol Hill was reached was there any sign of a crowd, and this was a small one.

Mr. Truman waited in Speaker Rayburn's office until it was time for him to enter the chamber. Meantime the galleries were jammed to the doors. There was a lot of neck-craning in the direction of the family gallery, where sat the country's most famous bride, Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, wife of the Vice President.

Democrats Enthusiastic

It was just a little after 1 o'clock when Fishbait Miller sang out: "Mr. Speaker, the President of the United States."

Mr. Truman, on reaching the dais, shook hands with Vice President Barkley, Speaker Rayburn, Senate Secretary Leslie L. Biffle, and House Parliamentarian Lew Deschler.

From the way Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., of New York and most of the other Democrats applauded, it looked as if they were wilder about Harry than they were a year ago, after his 1948 triumph at the polls. This could only mean that they found out something while they were back home: that the President's stock has been going up.

On his way out of the House chamber, Mr. Truman stopped to shake hands with "Corky," 7-year-old son of Representative Walter B. Huber (D., Ohio).

Brannan Farm Plan Indorsed by Truman

President Truman, who likes to tell about his early years on a Missouri farm, came out for the Brannan Plan and wider farm price supports in his State of the Union message yesterday.

"Our farm legislation is still not adequate," he said. "Although Congress has properly declared as a matter of national policy that safeguards must be maintained against slumps in farm prices, there are serious shortcomings in the methods now available for carrying out this policy.

"Mandatory price supports should be provided for the commodities not now covered which are major sources of farm income."

Not Mentioned by Name

Mr. Truman then, without mentioning it by name, indorsed the Brannan Plan, as follows:

"We should provide a method of supporting farm income at fair levels which will, at the same time, avoid piling up unmanageable surpluses and allow consumers to obtain the full benefit of our abundant agricultural production.

"A system of production payments gives the greatest promise of accomplishing this purpose. I recommend that the use of such system be authorized."

Throughout his entire message a thread of concern for the farmers' welfare was discernable. It gave evidence that the President intends to continue his successful 1948 program of appealing to the rank and file of the farmers over the heads of their farm organization leaders.

Only recently the two greatest farm organizations, the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange, denounced the Brannan Plan. Farm leaders in the Administration are convinced that the farm organizations do not reflect the attitude of their own members, let alone of the farming industry.

Seen as Intention to Fight

His remarks also were taken to mean that he intends to fight it out with the Republicans, as he did in 1948, for the votes of the traditionally Republican Midwest farm areas.

Points that the President touched upon of interest to farmers included:

1. His appeal for large-scale continuation of the European Recovery Program. ERP has aided farming by maintaining large exports markets for American farm products.

2. His urging that America join the International Trade Organization, for reasons similar to above.

3. His new appeal for Point Four: "An expanding world economy requires the improvement of living standards and the development of resources in areas where human poverty and misery now prevail."

4. Improvement in our standard of living, which he called "increasing freedom from poverty and drudgery," and which has "given a fuller meaning to American life."

These gains, he said, "cannot be achieved unles we have a stable and prosperous agriculture. They cannot be achieved unless we conserve and develop our natural resources in the public interest."

"Special Responsibility"

5. "In achieving these gains," Mr. Truman said, "the Government has a special responsibility to help create and maintain the conditions which will permit the growth we know is possible.

"Foremost among these conditions is the need for a fair distribution of our increasing prosperity among all the great groups of our population who help to bring it about—business, labor and agriculture."

6. Later he touched upon soil and water conservation. "If we are to achieve a better life for all," he said, "the natural resources of the country must be regarded as a public trust.

"We must use our precious assets of soil, water, forest and grassland in such a way that they become constantly more productive and valuable."

7. Still later he spoke of both the production and transmission of public power, and their related hydroelectric and irrigation undertakings, both matters of interest to farmers in the areas affected.

8. Similarly, he spoke of the proposed Columbia Valley Administration as one of the measures so "we can be sure of transmitting to our children and our children's children a country far richer and more productive than the one we know today."

9. He also mentioned enlargement of the Social Security System—and increasing coverage under it. Many farm groups have long sought Social Security benefits.

Conciliatory Tone in President's Message

eign affairs that has been enjoyed by this Administration."

His quietly-read recital of Fair Deal achievements read more like a keynote speech than the barbed platforms he has so offered but nearly all of his 1948-49 "planks" were there.

He wove them into his speech in this order:

DRAFT—Selective Service is an essential part of our defense and must be continued. (Completely omitted were his former demands for universal military training.)

Marshall Plan Not Complete

FOREIGN AID—We must put into effect the common defense plans anticipated in the North Atlantic Pact. The Marshall Plan has been a great success, but is not complete. It would be "false economy" to stop or cripple it now.

WORLD TRADE — We should promptly joint the International Trade Organization.

POINT FOUR—It is more essential than ever that Congress promptly approve measures to increase the flow of American technical assistance and capital investment to under-developed regions.

ANTI-MONOPOLY — Congress should complete action at this session on House-passed legislation closing loopholes in the Clayton Act which now permits monopolistic mergers. Soon he will send Congress a series of proposals to strengthen the antimonopoly laws, assist small business, and encourage growth of new enterprise.

Repeal of T-H Act Asked

LABOR—He again urged repeal of the Taft-Hartley law, but did not call it by its GOP label. In addition he recommended creation of a labor extension service to encourage educational activities in the field of "modern labor relations."

FARM—For the first time he formally recommended the Brannan farm plan to Congress, though he officially indorsed it in Des Moines last year. But again he did not call it by its controversial name.

HOUSING—We have laid the ground work for relief to low income families and now should provide a vigorous program to help cooperatives and other nonprofit groups build houses for "middle income" families (Sparkman bill).

Extending Rent Controls

CONTROLS—Of the Administration's once sweeping program of anti-inflation controls, he recommended enactment of only one —extension of rent controls. He made no mention of stand-by price controls, credit controls and other Fair Deal inflation checks sidetracked by Congress last year.

PUBLIC POWER AND RESOURCES—We need to enlarge the production and transmission of public power, particularly in regions which have not had its "benefits." Once more he asked Congress to approve the St. Lawrence Seaway and power project and again asked creation of a Columbia River Administration.

SCIENCE—We "stand on the threshold of new wonders." Congress should complete action on the National Science Foundation bill to equip ourselves with increasing knowledge and maintain our place in the advance of science.

SOCIAL SECURITY—Congress should complete action this session on House-passed legislation increasing the benefits and extensing coverage of old age and survivors insurance. In addition, Congress should strengthen the unemployment compensation law to meet present-day needs more adequately.

Remedy Doctor Shortage

HEALTH — Congress should remedy the shortage of doctors, nurses and public health services, and create a system of medical insurance so all Americans can afford good medical care. He did not call it "compulsory" health insurance, much less by the name the AMA gave it — "Socialized Medicine."

AID TO EDUCATION — Congress should no longer delay Senate-passed legislation providing Federal assistance to the States so they can maintain adequate schools.

CIVIL RIGHTS—Mr. Truman again plumped for the civil rights program but did not name all the specific bills. However, he specifically asked "home rule" for the District, statehood for Alaska and Hawaii, and a greater measure of self-government for our island possessions.

DISPLACED PERSONS — He again urged prompt enactment of House-passed legislation extending and broadening the displaced persons law and removing discriminatory features.

"New Ghost" Reported

On virtually every one of these points the President got a hand. Sometimes the applause was a mere ripple of handclaps. Often it was lopsidedly Democratic. Frequently the cheers were actually led from the Executive Gallery, where Clark Clifford, Mr. Truman's ex-ghost writer, clapped enthusiasticaly.

One wag wisecracked that Clifford was applauding his successor. From the altered tone of his speech, Mr. Truman already has a new "ghost."

Newlywed Mrs. Alben Barkley, watching her husband preside jointly with Speaker Sam Rayburn, clapped too, from another gallery.

GOP Joins in Final Acclaim

But the standing acclaim Mr. Truman received at the end of the speech wasn't gallery-led. Hard-riding GOP leaders who later issued statements lambasting Mr. Truman's "lip service" to his program, relaxed and lent a hand.

The President presented his call for "substantial expenditures which are necessary to the growth and expansion of the domestic economy, but he did not put a cost tag on his budget, due Monday.

Speaker Rayburn, however, let the cat out of the bag inadvertently just before the speech. Assuming the budget figures would be touched on in the message, Rayburn told reporters the cost total would run a little higher than 42 billion dollars.

Rayburn said there would be an over-all cut of about $1,800,000,000 below the current fiscal budget, which this year runs about $43,900,000,000. Although there will be a reduction of about three billion dollars in defense and foreign assistance spending, the Speaker said it will be partially offset by an increase of about $1,200,000,000 in domestic spending.

Doughton Lukewarm

The President's soft call for moderate upward revision of some taxes to remedy inequities, as "the quickest and safest way of balancing the budget," got only a lukewarm reception from House Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.).

Rayburn told reporters on Tuesday that Doughton's committee will consider general revisions in the tax structure, to take off some taxes that pinch, and make up the revenue elsewhere.

After the message, Doughton told newsmen his committee will await the President's specific tax recommendations, and consider them "at the earliest practicable date." But Doughton added:

"Although I agree that tax revision legislation should include elimination of inequities and closing of loopholes, it has for some time been my view that the most effective approach to the solution of our fiscal problem is a sharp reduction in expenditures.

"In my opinion every possible economy should be made and every existent loophole in the tax laws should be closed before consideration is given to increasing present high tax rates."

Omissions Cause Comment

Omissions from the President's message caused as much or more comment than his failure to add anything new. Besides dropping his broad anti-inflation program and failing to press for universal training, Mr. Truman did not renew his proposal of last year that the Government build steel plants if necessary to increase steel production.

Nor did he push for the Hoover Commission's Government reorganization proposals, though he is expected to present several reorganization plans in line with them. Republicans, who have stressed the Hoover recommendations as one way to get economy in Government, sharply criticized his failure to mention them.

Mr. Truman backed into his major recommendations after a philosophical look at the aims and achievements of his Administration. He reported that the state of the Union "continues to be good."

Reversed Economic Downturns

"We have met and reversed the first significant downturn in economic activity since the war," he told Congress.

"Today by the grace of God, we stand a free and prosperous Nation with greater possibilities for the future than any people have ever had in the history of the world."

At mid-century, he reviewed the last 50 years and took a look at the next 50, which he said may be "decisive in the history of man on this planet."

"Two world-shattering wars have proved that no corner of the earth can be isolated from the affairs of mankind," he said. "The human race has reached a turning point. Man has opened the secrets of nature and mastered new powers . . ."

Center of World Affairs

The world must create a "moral and legal framework" to insure man's new powers will be used for good and not for evil, he said.

In shaping the outcome, he said the people of the United States, who have "moved from the edge to the center of world affairs," will play the leading role.

"Our objective in the world is peace," he said. "Our country has joined with others in the task of achieving peace. We know this is not an easy task, or a short one. But we are determined to see it through."

Translating "the spirit in which this great Republic was founded" in terms of present policies, the President said:

"In foreign policy, they mean that we can never be tolerant of oppression or tyranny. They mean that we must throw our weight on the side of the greater freedom and a better life for all peoples.

"We shall continue to give our wholehearted support to the United Nations . . . We are working toward the time when the United Nations will control weapons of mass destruction and will have the forces to preserve international law and order.

"While the world remains unsettled, however, and as long as our own security and the security of the free world require, we will maintain a strong and well-balanced defense organization . . ."

He told Congress that while great problems still confront us, "the greatest danger has receded—the possibility that faced us three years ago that most of Europe and the Mediterranean area might collapse under totalitarian pressure."

Stressing the need for "Point Four" aid to underdeveloped regions, particularly in the Far East, he said recent world events make prompt action "imperative."

Hits at Communism

He said this program has nothing in common "with either the old imperialism of the last century or the new imperialism of the Communists."

Then he warned that the world today is confronted by a new danger—"that the rising demand of people everywhere for freedom and a better life may be corrupted and betrayed by the false promises of communism."

He said communism, in a ruthless struggle for power, seizes upon our imperfections and takes advantage of the delays and setbacks that are part of the democratic process. The challenge of communism is more than a military challenge, he said.

zation of America and elimination of the traditional American competitive system which made this Nation the greatest on earth."

The House Republicans declared Mr. Truman's message also gave notice to housewives, working men, farmers and business men that "there is no hope at any time in the foreseeable future" for tax relief and Government economy.

On the other hand, Democratic leaders found much to praise in the message.

"It is a courageous message consistent with President Truman's leadership," said Representative McCormack (Mass.), the House Democratic leader. "Internationally, it shows his determination to stop Communism and aggression; from the domestic side, the strengthening of the family life of America."

Senator Lucas (Ill.), the Democratic Senate leader, called the message an eloquent expression of the President's "humanitarian philosophy."

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) said the message reminded him of the words of the Air Corps song—"Off We Go Into the Wild Blue Yonder."

The Republican Senate leader, Senator Wherry (Nebr.), ripped into the President for seeking "more back-breaking taxes to carry forward his program of spendthrift socialism."

Wherry also attacked Administration policy in the Far East

Democratic chairmen of the Senate and House committees which handle tax matters both called for cuts in Government spending.

"The President wants a 'moderate amount' of new taxes," commented Senator George (G.), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. "Well, I want a 'moderate amount' of expenditure reduction. Maybe we can get together."

Representative Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, told reporters:

"In my opinion every possible economy should be made. Every existing loophole in the tax laws should be closed before consideration is given to increasing high tax rates."

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) said that the real income of the American people will go down if the President's "socialistic plans" are adopted by Congress.

But Senators Pepper (D., Fla.) and Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) said the message was a great one.

Thomas, chairman of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, commented:

"I was very happy over his support for the welfare program. Our committee will do everything it can to further his plans."

"A good message," said Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.). "I don't agree with everything in it but on the whole it was a very good message."

Barkley to Speak At Gompers Centennial Dinner

Vice President Alben W. Barkley will be the principal speaker at the Samuel Gompers centennial dinner to be held tonight at 7 at the Statler Hotel.

The dinner will kick off a year-long celebration in honor of the great labor leader, who was born in London, January 27, 1850, came to this country at the age of 13, and founded the American Federation of Labor in the mid-eighties.

A cigar-maker by trade, Gompers joined New York local of the Cigar Makers Union, and quickly became the leader in the American labor movement. He was the first president of the AFL, from 1886 to his death in 1924.

William Green, president, and Matthew Woll, vice president of the AFL, will also speak at tonight's dinner.

Examiner Hears Complaint Against Bond Stores

Points of law involved in a complaint served by the Federal Trade Commission on Bond Stores, Inc., 380 5th ave., New York City, were argued yesterday at an FTC hearing.

Under debate were FTC's jurisdiction in the case and whether interstate commerce is involved.

Trial Examiner Webster Ballinger said the record would be closed when he received the official transcript of testimony but did not indicate when he would rule on the merits of the complaint, which charged the clothing firm with efforts to obtain credit information "by subterfuge."

Single Appropriation Bill Is Not Assured

By the United Press

Speaker Sam Rayburn yesterday cast doubt on whether Congress would wrap all its money bills into one package this year.

Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee, flatly said his group would lump all spending in an omnibus bill, keeping the total down to expected Government income.

Later the Senate Appropriations Committee voted formally to do the same thing. It appointed a subcommittee to talk it over with Cannon's group.

But Rayburn said it had not been definitely decided yet whether the "one-package" approach would be used. He said that might have to be decided by a caucus of House Democrats. Since the House originates all money bills, its decision would control the final outcome.

Some lawmakers have objected to the one-package approach. They fear it might permit unprecedented "log-rolling," with much swapping of votes for pet projects. Fears also have been expressed that this plan might confront the President with the choice of accepting many items he dislikes or throwing the whole money bill back to Congress.

Lawmakers supporting the "one-package" approach say it is the best way to balance the Federal budget.

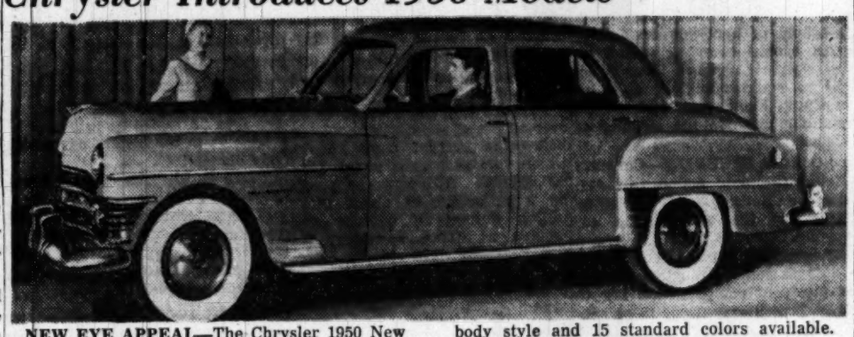
Treasury figures yesterday showed the Government had a deficit of $3,299,798,000 at the end of 1949—half-way through the current fiscal year.

Spending for the first half of fiscal 1950 totaled $20,974,413,000 and receipts were $17,764,614,000. There was a slight surplus on the same day a year earlier.

The national debt was $257,160,110,000 on December 30, or $4,405,708,000 more than on the final business day of 1948.

Congressional sources have estimated that the total dificit, when the fiscal year ends June 30, will be about five billion dollars.

Chrysler Introduces 1950 Models



NEW EYE APPEAL—The Chrysler 1950 New Yorker four-door sedan (above) has restyled longer rear fenders, accentuating its long and low appearance. Other features include more massive bumpers, new radiator grille, better visibility from the larger rear window and a new line of upholstery fabrics. There are 19 body style and 15 standard colors available. No price changes were announced. Wholly new in the Chrysler line is its Newport model offered in the Windsor, New Yorker and Town and Country models. It is, in effect, a hardtop convertible

Job Increase Behind Gain In Population

By The Associated Press

The Nation is failing to create enough jobs for its fast-growing population.

So says Secretary of Commerce Sawyer in summing up the 1949 job situation.

Sawyer pointed out that the average 58,700,000 employed last year was only slightly under the 1948 record.

However, he said, there was an average of 3,400,000 unemployed in 1949. This was a big jump from the average of 2,100,000 jobless in 1947 and 1948.

The explanation, Sawyer said, is that new people are entering the labor force, looking for jobs, at a greater rate than the number of jobs is increasing.

Sawyer's comments were made in connection with Census Bureau employment figures that showed total civilian employment for December at 58,556,000.

Farm employment seasonably declined 1,105,000, but nonfarm employment rose 143,000, leaving 962,000 fewer employed in December than in November. The unemployed in December numbered 3,489,000.

The fast rise in the unemployed is taking a big nick out of State unemployment insurance funds, too. A survey on this came from Robert C. Goodwin, director of the Labor Department's Bureau of Employment Security.

Goodwin said the jobless payments reached a record $1,700,000,000 in 1949. The previous record was $1,100,000,000 in 1946.

The number of people getting the jobless payments, 7,500,000, also set a new record. The old high was 5,200,000 in 1940.

95 Pct. Boost

Railroads Ask Big Increase In Mail Pay

The Nation's major railroads yesterday asked the Government to nearly double their pay for carrying the mails, as compared with levels at the beginning of 1947.

The petition was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. The rail carriers have been pressing the ICC for higher mail pay for the last two years. They contend that mounting operating costs over the last several years make a permanent adjustment in mail pay rates necessary.

Railroad sources estimated that if yesterday's revised petition is approved it will yield the carriers more than 100 million dollars in excess of what they now get for hauling mail.

The original rate boost petition was filed in February, 1947. That requested a 45 percent hike in rates. The ICC temporarily granted a 25 percent increase while studying the matter. The original plea has been amended several times to ask even higher rates.

Yesterday's amendment asks that compensation be fixed at 95 per cent above the January, 1947, rates.

The railroads said that "on the basis of present levels of operating costs and rates, fares and charges, the earnings of Class 1 railroads as a whole will be inadequate to establish credit, properly to maintain their properties, and to make the necessary capital additions and betterments to plants consistent with the volume of traffic now being handled."

FCC Reduces Depreciation Rate of AT&T

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday directed the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to reduce the annual depreciation rate on its long-distance equipment from 4.52 to 3.92 percent.

The change will be effective as of January 1, 1950. The order resulted from studies by the FCC.

One effect will be to increase the amount of taxes AT&T must pay, since depreciation allowances are deductible from taxable corporate income. The reduced allowance also could figure importantly in future questions as to rate charges.

PUC Is Studying C&P Depreciation Question

The District Public Utilities Commission is making a joint study with the Federal Communications Commission of the proper depreciation rate on Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. facilities used in intra-District service.

A decision by PUC on proposed increases in local telephone rates will await completion of this study, James H. Flanagan, PUC chairman, said last night.

Hybrid Bears Have Babies, Baffling All

The Washington Post
SNOWY
The proud papa

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Those rascally hybrid bears at the Zoo have done it again.

They've had babies, confounding the geneticists and setting the zoological world a-twitter.

Hybrid bears aren't supposed to have offspring any more than mules are, said Zoo Director William M. Mann.

But this is the second time out for this pair. Their first litter—twins—arrived a year ago almost to the day. It marked the first such reported births in bear history.

Twins Died

The twins didn't live. Dr. Mann and the geneticists are hoping against hope the new litter does. Genetics-wise, the blessed event is further interesting for the fact the parents are brother and sister.

The parents were born of a polar bear father, name of Snowy, and an Alaskan brown bear mother who answered to Ramona.

For offspring to come to such a union was in itself unprecedented and also more or less accidental—as far as the Zoo was concerned. But it started, in 1936, a sort of saga in bear genetics there.

Number Unknown

Number of the present litter is unknown, the mother—in the manner of bears—having secluded herself in her den. How do the Zoo people know she's a mother again? It's simple—there comes, from the den, the sound of young nursing.

Robert Cook, editor of the Journal of Heredity, said geneticists would be quite interested to see if they lived. So will Dr. Mann, admitting that would be "a miracle."

"But if they do," he said, "—well, it would be wonderful to see how they develop."

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The sixty-fourth annual debate on the merits of butter versus oleomargarine began in the Senate yesterday and sounded like a phonograph record worn out by constant replaying.

The case for margarine was opened by Senator J. W. Fulbright (D., Ark.). Fullbright talked for 34 pages and 2½ hours. He mentioned one new argument—that "last year, New Hampshire, California, Tennessee and Ohio abolished their yellow margarine prohibitions."

In a clash with Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), a butter champion, over the desire of margarine makers to color their product yellow to look like butter, Fulbright declared:

"Why do we like white shirts? Everybody here . . ." he said, gazing around at the 12 other Senators on the floor "has on a white shirt.

"Why don't we wear black shirts like they did in Italy at one time?"

Same With Artificial Leather

"It's the same thing with artificial leather. I don't know why the growers of livestock didn't get a law prohibiting artificial leather."

In the Senate Finance Committee bill removing taxes and license fees on margarine is a provision that all margarine served in public eating houses be served in triangular shape.

Gillette questioned Committee Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) on that provision. It could be interpreted, Gillette said, that a large party served in a restaurant could be served a large piece of margarine shaped like a triangle.

"Would it be necessary," Gillette inquired, "for every member to cut his piece three-cornered, too?"

Fulbright went back to the debates on the original oleomargarine tax bills in 1886. He told how the 10-cents-a-pound tax on yellow margarine was fought out, and also how the high license fees ($600 a year for manufacturers, $480 for wholesalers and $48 for retailers of yellow margarine) came into being.

Speedy Passage Asked

At the end he asked speedy passage of the repealer which already had passed the House in the same form as the Senate committee measure.

When Fulbright finished, Gillette, who will open the fight for the butter interests, asked to be recognized at the opening of today's session.

Gillette is one of 26 dairy State Senators offering a substitute bill. Their measure would abolish all Federal taxes on margarine but would prohibit interstate commerce in yellow oleo. A similar bill was killed in the House last session.

Seven other amendments to the measure have been offered. They range all the way to repeal of all excise taxes (on furs, cosmetics, jewelry, telephone bills, etc.) to repeal only of amusement taxes at county fairs.

U. S. Will Hear Waltz Danish King Conducted

Copenhagen, Denmark, Jan. 4 (AP).—United States and Canadian radio listeners will get a chance to judge King Frederik's talents as an orchestra conductor this Friday.

The monarch has given Illian Ellis, Copenhagen disk jockey, permission to use a recording of the Amelia Waltz" on her regular short-wave program to Canada and the United States. The melody was recorded by the Royal Danish Opera Orchestra, led by Frederik.

The transmission will be broadcast at 9 p. m (EST) Friday.

Illinois Village Bans 'Keeping' of Horses

Bradley, Ill., Jan. 4 (U.P.).—This little village formally ended horse and buggy days today with an ordinance forbidding the "running at large" or "keeping" of horses.

Village President Clarence Lock said the order also banned the keeping of chickens, geese, ducks, turkeys, goats, pigs or any other kind of fowl or animal.

Indian-Pakistan War May Come, Patel Says

Bombay, India, Jan. 4 (U.P.)—Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel warned tonight that India's relations with Pakistan had become so strained they were "capable of provoking war."

Patel, second in power only to Prime Minister Jawaharlal, said "I want the nation to be prepared for the worst."

Orange Price Boost Feared in Citrus Squeeze

The price situation on citrus fruits here is a sour one, and there is little hope it will get sweeter.

A consequence of the high grapefruit prices is a switch to oranges for breakfast, which may make their prices bitter, too.

As for lemons, the head of a northern Virginia food chain said last night their prices have soared to 90 cents a dozen—the highest in the past decade and more than double last year's. The reason: Small supply as a result of the 1949 freezes.

Grapefruit prices have gone about the same way, he said. The reason is a short supply resulting from last year's hurricane.

His customers are switching to oranges and this increased demand is nudging up oranges. At present they cost 10 to 12 cents a dozen more than last year, he said.

Spokesmen for three other chains also reported a sharp boost in grapefruit and lemon prices, but differed on the extent. One chain made the following comparisons:

Last year oranges sold at this period at 5 cents a pound, 7 cents today; lemons last year were 15 cents a pound, 35 cents today; grapefruit, Floridas 5 cents a pound, now 7 cents; Texas pink 7 cents last year and 12 cents this year.

A second chain reported orange prices the same as last year, grapefruits up 2 cents a pound and lemons "a few cents." The third reported grapefruits doubled from last year's 5-cents-a-pound price, lemons "a little higher" and oranges about the same.

A spokesman for the wholesalers refused to pin the blame for today's citrus prices on Mother Nature exclusively.

John R. Van Arnum, secretary of the National League of Wholesale Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Distributors, said wholesale prices on oranges were the same as last year; grapefruit up about 2 cents each and lemons about the same as last year.

The villains, in his view, are the retailers with "50 to 100 percent markups."

As for the future, yesterday the Associated Press reported another freeze in the California citrus regions and indications of snow thereafter. Last month 5 percent of the San Bernardino crop was wiped out by a frost.

Libel on Raped Girl Charged To 2 Newsmen

Greenwood, S. C., Jan. 4 (AP).—Two newspapermen were indicted today for libel in their stories on the execution of a Negro rapist.

Judge J. Robert Martin, jr., immediately ordered bench warrants for Deling Booth of the Columbia Bureau of the Associated Press, and John H. McCray, publisher of the Lighthouse and Informer, Negro newspaper published at Columbia.

The indictments charge the defendants wrote "false, malicious and defamatory words and statements which tend to injure" the character of the 15-year-old white rape victim.

Crowd Jams Boston Store For TV Sets at $99 to $179

Boston, Jan. 4 (AP).—A crowd estimated at more than 1000 jammed the entrances to the Jordan Marsh Co. department store at opening time today for a sale advertised as one million dollars' worth of television sets at $60 to $200 reductions."

Jordan's, which boasts it is the Nation's fourth largest department store—and New England's largest—said 15 policemen were hired to keep order among shoppers standing "shoulder to shoulder" in the TV department. The estimate of the crowd was made by a store official.

The storage declined to disclose total sales but one official who agreed to be quoted by name said it was "by far the biggest day in any department in the history of the store—by thousands of dollars." He said it was made possible by a special purchase.

Prices for the "ninety-ninth birthday sale" ranged from $99.99 for a table model with 10-inch screen and built-in antenna to $179.99 for a table model with 16-inch screen and built-in antenna.

Christoffel Asks to See 'Hill' Diaries

Harold R. Christoffel, Wisconsin labor leader accused of perjury, asked District Court yesterday to allow him to see the "personal" and "official" diaries of nine Congressmen during 1947.

Christoffel faces trial in District Court January 16 on a charge of lying as to Communist affiliations before a House Labor Committee in 1947.

Recently the United States Supreme Court set aside a perjury conviction against Christoffel on the ground that evidence was lacking that a quorum of the committee was present during the testimony. The diaries of the committeemen will be used to find out whether a quorum was present, the court was told.

He also asked for a trial postponement until March 16, for transfer of the case to Wisconsin and for dismissal of the indictment

Paul Kerman Named DGS President

Paul D. Kerman, 4461 S. Dakota ave. ne., has been elected president of the District Grocery Stores, the job he held between 1944 and 1949. He succeeds Joseph Muchmick, 5701 32d st. nw.

Kerman

Kerman was elected at a membership meeting Tuesday night at the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw.

Other officers named were Louis Fox, 3356 Erie st. se., first vice president; Louis Shankman, 427 Boyd ave., Takoma Park, Md., second vice president; Henry Noon, 131 Worthington Circle, Falls Church, Va., third vice president; Charles Silverman, 6710 Gude ave., Takoma Park, secretary, and Louis Biskin, 250 Carroll ave., Takoma Park, treasurer. Fox and Biskin were reelected.

Twelve men were elected directors of the organization: Charles Allenstein, Nathan Bernstein, Benjamin Bessel, Reuben Chasen, Al Golden, Murray King, Nathan Movitz, Sam Klein, William Pearlman, Abe Rosenfield, Ben Schulman and Frank Seidel.

Democratic Group Backs Dollar Drive

Inauguration of a "Dollars from Democrats" campaign yesterday was given official blessing of the Montgomery County (Md.) Democratic State Central Committee.

J. Bond Smith, chairman was directed to oversee such a drive, which would have the double purpose of collecting funds for the campaign and interesting Democrats in party activities, he said. The committee met at Rockville yesterday.

The idea had been presented by a group of 80 Democrats who included a large number of persons who had been antiorganization in the last several campaigns. Use of the dollars drive to raise funds and cement party loyalty was urged in a letter to the central committee.

Pending completion of details of the campaign, Smith said, contributors should send their funds to J. Ingram Medley, treasurer, at 8634 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, Md.

Originators of the plan suggested that it might solidify party unity enough to permit "election of a Democratic congressman from this district in November."

Tel Aviv Amends Defense Plans as Neighbors Rearm

Tel Aviv, Israel, Jan 4 (U.P.).—The Israeli cabinet announced today it had reconsidered its "defense situation and military requirements" — reportedly in the light of an armaments race in neighboring Arab states.

The communique said merely that the cabinet had "approved amendments to the military service bill, which will be brought before the Knesset (Parliament.)" But it gave no inkling of the government's decisions.

Brig. Yigal Yadin, chief of staff, recently declared the Arabs are preparing for a "second round" in the Palestine war.

Informed sources said the reported Egyptian rearmament, the coup d'etat in Syria and King Abdullah's plan to annex Arab Palestine to Hashemite Jordan forced the cabinet to reexamine its defense plans.

Italy's Ship Strike Ends

Genoa, Italy, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Maritime workers today ended their protest strike against the government's failure to pay promptly five months' back benefits to pensioned seamen. Their decision allowed hundreds of South American Holy Year pilgrims to begin their voyages home.

IUE Charges Rival 'Stalls' in Vote Move

The National Labor Relations Board found itself suffering from a tingling case of electric shock yesterday as a result of the latest maneuvers by the right-wing CIO International Union of Electrical Workers and the left-wing CIO-expelled United Electrical Workers.

The rival unions are battling for the right to represent the thousands of electrical equipment employes of General Electric, Westinghouse, and General Motors.

On Tuesday, left-wing UE urged that the NLRB conduct simultaneous elections in all the plants of the three big corporations on a "consent basis." Yesterday, the right-wing IUE charged that the UE request was but another stalling tactic in a representation elections until after mid-March.

Instead, the IUE called for consent elections by February 1, and disputed elections by February 15, at General Motors, with a similarly speedy time schedule at the plants of the other companies.

Neutral observers believe the IUE is pressing for an early vote at GM because it has a good chance of making a strong showing there, and thereby get a psychological advantage in the elections at the other plants.

Robber Asks His Cell Again

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 4 (AP).—An Alabama convict free on parole has volunteered to return to prison because he is "embarrassed" by the publicity caused by his release.

The offer, made by parolee Glenn Davis, 40-year-old convicted robber, was rejected and Davis was told to return to his job on a chicken farm.

Davis said he wished to relieve the parole board of any possible criticism for freeing him.

Davis said he had been living like a "caged animal" on the chicken farm. People drove by the farm just to see what he looked like, he added.

Coal Order to Hit Few Trains Here

Train transportation in Washington will not be affected severely by the Interstate Commerce Commission's order for a one-third cutback on many coal-burning passenger lines.

Although two of the five main railroads serving the Capital still were revising schedules last night, all said most of their trains here either are Diesel-driven or are considered high revenue producers, so would not be cut.

Six Trains Dropped

The first cuts for Washington—six trains—were announced by the Baltimore & Ohio. They are the Cincinatian (Nos. 75 and 76) from Baltimore to Cincinnati via Washington—a crack service; Nos. 45 and 46, between Washington and Philadelphia, and trains 177 and 178, locals between Washington and Brunswick, Md.

Other B. & O. cuts call for withdrawal of 11 more trains and the placing of four more on half-time schedules.

The B. & O.'s 177 and 178 were also cut under the ICC's last curtailment order, October 25 to November 20. So were Washington-Harrisburg train and sleeping cars on three Washington-New York State runs.

Southern Railway, first system to announce a coal-conservation timetable, said 28 trains would be discontinued, none of them to Washington.

Most of the Southern's discontinued trains are between points in North and South Carolina. Two are between East St. Louis, Ill., and Louisville, Ky. Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia schedules also are affected.

Chesapeake & Ohio representatives in Washington said their schedules would be the most deeply curtailed, since all trains into Washington are coal-burning. The principal trains, however, will not be affected, since they are important revenue sources.

The Pennsylvania said it would not be able to announce new schedules until today, but pointed out that all lines reaching Washington are diesel or electric powered.

The Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad Co., which handles many trains to and from Florida via Washington, said it recently had added five diesels to its service. The new equipment should aid in maintaining current schedules, a spokesman said.

Southern Belle Is 'Maid of Cotton'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ELIZABETH A. McGEE, a South Carolina beauty from Spartanburg, who attends fashionable Holton Arms Junior College here, is the 1950 "Maid of Cotton." She won the title over 20 girls in Memphis, Tenn. She'll travel about 40,000 miles by plane and train, visit 40 cities in a coast-to-coast tour as King Cotton's good-will ambassador. She is 19 years old.

Rails' Coal Use Is Ordered Cut

by Southern, Northern, and Western operators. The charges are being investigated by the field staff of the NLRB Baltimore office. John Penello, director of the Baltimore office, hopes to have a report on his investigation ready sometime next week. If Penello finds merit in the charges, NLRB General Counsel Robert Denham can obtain a temporary injunction in District Court here.

"Grave Unrest" Reported

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch quoted John L. Lewis as saying there is "grave unrest" among the UMW's 480,000 diggers because "the operators will not permit the workers to share in the increase in the price of the coal."

Lewis charged that the operators have increased the price of coal recently, although "there has been no increase in the cost of production." He described the walkout of some 17,500 UMW miners in Illinois, Tuesday and Wednesday, as a local manifestation of the miners' attitude toward the operators.

Except for some few independent companies which have signed up new contracts on John L.'s terms, the Nation's coal mines served by UMW members have been on a three-day week and no-day week at various intervals since June 30, when the old work contract ran out. The miners seek increased wages and higher welfare fund royalties.

Fire Extinguished On U. S. Freighter

Halifax, Jan. 4 (AP).—The United States freighter Mormacreed reported today that crew members have extinguished a fire in a cargo of corn in her hold.

The 6689-ton ship reported earlier that she was steaming toward Halifax and fire equipment was requested at the pier. The blaze broke out in a cargo of dried corn, loaded at Baltimore, while the ship was en route to the United Kingdom.

Funeral Rites Set For Noronic Victims

Toronto, Jan. 4 (AP).—Chief Coroner Smirle Lawson said tonight that a semiprivate funeral service will be held January 17 at Mount Pleasant Cemetery here for victims of the Noronic steamship fire September 17.

One hundred nineteen persons died in the dockside disaster.

Raise for 90 Employes Ends Dodge Hotel Strike Threat

AFL hotel workers won a wage increase, shorter hours and other benefits in a contract negotiated with the Dodge Hotel yesterday.

The settlement, arranged at a mediation meeting called by Conciliation Commissioner Richard Goodrick, followed a strike vote by the union.

Sam Levine, attorney and negotiator for the joint executive board, Hotel and Restaurant Workers and Bartenders International, estimated that some 90 employes of the hotel will get wage increases, including 7½ to 10 cents an hour for non-tip personnel and flat boosts for waitresses, doormen, and bellmen. The new contract eliminates split work shifts, establishes the 48-hour week, improves vacation schedules, and sets up a system of employer-financed social insurance.

British Honduran Prices Rise on Devaluation

Belize, British Honduras, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—The recent devaluation of the Bahamas dollar was reflected in higher prices today as the public maintained its "wait and see" attitude toward the government action.

The price of kerosene shot up 10 cents per gallon and the government immediately announced a 6-cent subsidy in an effort to keep the effect of Monday's devaluation from being felt too severely.

Nation-Wide Telephone Strike Threatens by End of February company offers to renew the old contract.

"We believe we have a pretty clear picture of what the Bell system is up to," Jones asserted. He said that CWA believes the union is being forced into a strike by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., parent company of the Bell system. Jones added that the union was prepared, if necessary, for such a showdown fight, and observed that CWA was in a better position to conduct a Nation-wide walkout than it was in 1947, when it struck for six weeks.

Jones also observed that the union might be forced to strike before the end of February, and if so, this strike might well be of a national nature. Two of the divisions in position to strike now, tric installations men and dishe pointed out, cover Western Electribution employes, whose members work all over the country. Should these two units walk out and set up picket lines, other telephone workers would refuse to cross the lines, Jones said.

Company's Reply

A spokesman for A. T. & T., commenting on the CWA announcement, said last night that "telephone workers are well paid . . . telephone wages compare favorably with those paid by other concerns in the same communities for work requiring similar skill and experience."

The A. T. & T. statement insisted that telephone wages have been increased "very substantially" during and since the war. The statement said that telephone splicers and repairmen who joined the Bell System in 1941 are now getting four times more in wages than when they started; operators, three times as much. Seventy percent of Bell employes will get a raise or raises during the next year under the existing method of wage progression, the company said.

"The current cost of wage increases placed in effect through the Bell System and since the war," the A. T. & T. statement asserted, "is about double the amount of telephone rate increases granted so far, to say nothing of the sharply increased cost of materials, buildings and equipment.

"Any general wage increase now would have to be paid by the telephone users.

Mrs. Roosevelt Sees 'Rights' Code Working Some Day

Lake Success, Jan. 4 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt says that despite the cold war she and others in the United Nations are working on a code of human rights which she hopes will work some day.

Her views on the usefulness of the work she is doing now in the United Nations were given late yesterday at a news conference in which she explained the United States' ideas on a proposed covenant on human rights. She spoke as United States member of the commission and not as the commission chairman.

Reminded by a reporter that the Soviet Union most likely would not accept the covenant and that the current international suspicion made the going rough, Mrs. Roosevelt said, "You can't allow that (the cold war) to hold you back from trying to get a framework which will be workable later."

Congressional Payroll

Since the salaries of congressional staff employes are paid by the public, an accounting of them to the public is long overdue. Such an accounting ought to be produced by the resolution which Representative Burdick has introduced for a joint Senate-House committee to investigate the congressional payroll. But the terms of the resolution invite a glossing over of some of the real defects in personnel policy on Capitol Hill. Mr. Burdick's attention is focused on illegal acts; he fears that conduct such as that of former Representative J. Parnell Thomas has caused disrespect for Congress as a whole. A payroll probe ought to aim at much more than a mere restoration of Congress to good repute among the people. A whitewash could achieve that result very easily.

What is really needed is a careful study of the qualifications and competence of congressional personnel. It may be taken for granted that few members of Congress are so stupid as to contrive the sordid kind of kickback for which Mr. Thomas went to jail. A kickback can be arranged in less obvious and more legal ways—through the device of nepotism, for example. If a Congressman hires his wife or his daughter as a secretary, her salary may be, in effect, an addition to his income; and sometimes, although certainly not always, she may be altogether unequal to the duties of her office.

From the public's point of view, payroll padding of one sort or another is likely to be a much more serious evil than the kickback. Because it is far more easily legalized and disguised, it is probably far more common. By payroll padding, we mean the employment of persons not thoroughly qualified for their jobs. We hope that the joint committee to be created if the Burdick resolution is adopted will go beyond the mere disclosure of crime, if any still exists on the Hill, and beyond the mere identification of congressional employes. It ought to review their fitness for their posts and give consideration to imposing standards, comparable to those operative in the executive branch of the Government, for the future employment of congressional staff members.

Light That Failed

The extinction of the New York Sun, after 117 years of continuous illumination, is a grievous bit of news, not merely because of the many famous or sentimental associations the name has held for all newspapermen who know something of the history of their trade, but also as another example of the dangerously monopolistic trend in American journalism. It is another proof that tremendous financial resources are necessary to survival.

According to its publisher, Mr. Thomas A. Dewart, static revenues and steadily rising costs of production tell the whole story of the Sun's demise. Chief among the causes of death Mr. Dewart placed the unrelenting pressures applied by the various trade unions for successive wage increases. The unions, he suggested in his valedictory statement, have been pursuing a suicidal policy. "Despite continued warnings of the economic consequences, various unions have forced, and are continuing to force, higher wages, until in the newspaper business as a whole, they have risen beyond reason." Even so, the ratio of increase in overhead expenses represented by payroll increases was surpassed by the increased costs of newsprint and other supplies.

The New York World-Telegram was in virtually the same position as the Sun. The difference was that the World-Telegram is part of a wealthy national syndicate which includes a highly profitable news service. Thus it is the World-Telegram rather than the Sun that survives. It has purchased the name and the good will and beyond much doubt will take over the greater portion of the Sun's 300,000 circulation.

One sad irony of the affair is that the Sun owed its origin to the belief of its founder, Benjamin Day, that the time had come when a newspaper could be published and sold profitably for the price of a penny. It was a notion that many of his colleagues considered mad; but, put into practice, it was successful from the beginning, and it led to a rapid proliferation of penny papers all over the country, among them the other famous Sun of Baltimore.

From a professional and technical standpoint, of course, the great days of the Sun were under its ownership by Charles A. Dana and his son, Paul Dana. Even in the days of its decline, the Sun was known as a "newspaperman's newspaper," and its stories and the feature articles in which it specialized were studied everywhere, even in class rooms, as models of the finest journalistic prose. It attracted some of the finest talents of the trade, among them Chester Lord, Will Irwin, and Frank Ward O'Malley.

After the Sun and the Evening Sun had been merged and transformed by the late Frank A. Munsey, the declining New York World succeeded to its place in the esteem and admiration of the craft. Thus, if professional judgment is a safe criterion, it might almost be laid down as a rule that nowadays the survival quality of a newspaper may be in inverse ratio to its journalistic quality.

State Of The Union

The backdrop of the President's message on the State of the Union is bright with a more or less fully employed economy at home but is clouded over with a foreign situation which is still far from tranquil. Health and strength at home provide the only hope that the Nation's aims in the world can be realized. Of what are they composed? "Strength," says Mr. Truman, "is not simply a matter of arms and force, it is a matter of economic growth, and social health, and vigorous institutions, public and private," and he specifies further that "we can achieve peace only if we maintain our productive energy, our democratic institutions, and our firm belief in individual freedom."

It is in the light of this admirable statement of objectives that the specific items in the President's program must be judged. To bolster our democratic institutions Mr. Truman again invites Congress to remove the impairment of civil rights from which many Americans, including those in the District of Columbia, are suffering. Certainly there will be none who profess a belief in free enterprise who can in good conscience take exception to Mr. Truman's views on the necessity to do unceasing battle on monopolism. This is one way in which the Government can release the productive energy of the American people, though in other items there is danger that that energy might be restricted instead of released. For instance, the call for another year of rent control will be scrutinized closely when the time comes for legislation. Controls once imposed are not easily abandoned, and experience in Europe is proof that new construction can be killed very effectively when rents are long removed from the realm of market prices.

This can likewise be said of rigid controls over farm prices. Mr. Truman last session backed and filled on farm legislation. He still hankers after the Brannan Plan, though without naming it, and it was due in the main to the work of Senator Anderson that the principle of flexibility in price supports was retained. Unfortunately, the principle still has to be translated into reality. However, the President, after saying that the program was "improved" at the last session, shows he is more interested in "supporting" farm incomes. Clearly there will not be much left of free enterprise in this country if the incomes of the farm population are to be insured.

To be sure, there can be no strict consistency in the application of measures which at one and the same time aim at maintaining the virtues and benefits of free enterprise and at using the power and purse of Government to cushion the shocks of the system, to contribute to its stability, and to correct the irrationalities which arise out of it. The public good should be the criterion. In this respect the improvement of the social security system, on which the President lays stress, will no doubt figure prominently in the work of the current session. In our view no item is of more importance. The pension schemes which are spreading in big-scale industry are in the nature of roadblocks to the widening and deepening of a national system of social security. Similarly, the subsidization of housing and power and hospital construction, conservation of the national resources, and aid to education come within the four corners of the President's statement of principle.

Where the President particularly loses sight of the national interest is in his observation on the Taft-Hartley law. It is simply not true to say that this law is "punitive in purpose and one-sided in operation." Actually the law ended one-sidedness—the one-sidedness of its predecessor law, the Wagner Act; and any deficiencies in the statute—and there are some—could easily be changed by amendments such as have been proposed already by the watchdog committee in Congress. Here the President, feeling that he has a rod in pickle for the next election, will not listen to reason. The Wagner Act was the enemy of free enterprise, and would have taken this country into a species of syndicalism. In labor the danger of monopolism is just as bad as in industry, as the case of John L. Lewis testifies.

Margarine Vs. Butter

The Federal taxes on oleomargarine yield little revenue, but the public has, nevertheless, paid heavily for the prolonged congressional battles growing out of efforts to repeal those taxes. Year after year Congress has debated the issue for days on end, rehashing pro and con repeal arguments. Witnesses for the dairy interests and the margarine industry have appeared repeatedly before congressional committees to plead their cause and lobbying groups have published vast masses of propaganda material. This outpouring of oratory, argument, and printed matter has cost a lot of money for which the public has to pay, directly or indirectly. Moreover, the prolonged debates on repeal measures have taken up time that should have been devoted to other pressing legislative issues. Hence, in addition to the familiar arguments in favor of repeal of the discriminatory taxes on margarine, enactment of a bona fide repeal bill would have the great advantage of cutting the printers' bills of the Government and the industries concerned and saving the time of busy legislators.

However, the battle for repeal is by no means won; for the dairy interests have not abandoned hope of attaching an amendment to the repeal bill banning shipments and sales of colored margarine in interstate commerce. The House eliminated a proposal of that kind from the bill, but it has bobbed up again in the Senate. This wrecking amendment, sponsored by the dairy interests, would cut off all sales of colored margarine in more than half the 32 States that now permit such sales, because they have no factories within their borders from which intrastate shipments could be made. No wonder the dairy interests are willing to abandon opposition to repeal of all Federal taxes and license fees, on the condition that market outlets for the colored product are restricted by an interstate shipment ban!

To buttress their case for this disingenuous move to impose new competitive handicaps on the margarine industry, the dairy interests stress the alleged necessity of protecting the public against fraudulent substitution of colored margarine for butter. Since margarine has to be wrapped and labeled, we do not believe that the practice of so-called butter-legging would be greatly encouraged by repeal of taxes on colored margarine resembling butter. Treasury officials, at any rate, are of the opinion that retention of these taxes is not needed for regulatory purposes—that is, to prevent misrepresentation. In any case, the slight encouragement that might be given to fraudulent substitution of margarine for butter is outweighed by the major arguments for unconditional repeal of taxes imposing an unfair competitive handicap on one industry in order to protect the interests of a rival industry.

The bill passed by the House, which is identical with the one now before the Senate, also includes a highly absurd and objectionable provision requiring public eating places to serve margarine in triangular shapes and to display signs or state on menus that margarine is being served. Dairy groups seize on this provision as a legislative admission of the dangers of fraud and the need for more comprehensive protection. They contend—and rightly—that the consumption of margarine in public eating places is limited and that the enforcement of such regulations would cost a great deal of money. We agree, and hope that the Senate will delete from the repeal bill the unworkable antifraud proposals. And we also hope the Senate will reject the amendment sponsored by the dairy interests that would impose new restrictions on colored margarine sales under the guise of protection against fraud. Otherwise passage of the bill will merely set the stage for renewal of the battle between the margarine and the dairy industries.

Doctor's Dilemma

It is a misfortune, in a way, that the tragic incident in New Hampshire in which a conscientious physician ended the suffering, and the life, of a presumably incurable cancer patient should have become mixed up with abstract arguments about euthanasia. The proponents of euthanasia, or mercy killing, take the view that society ought to authorize and legalize the painless extinction of hopeless sufferers and of certain types of the mentally deficient. The case in New Hampshire is one in which Dr. Herman N. Sander practiced euthanasia without any authorization and is therefore guilty of a crime. And the case must be judged, therefore, on its own particular merits rather than in terms of a theory.

Dr. Sander candidly dictated a notation for the Hillsborough County Hospital records that he had injected a lethal dose of air into the blood stream of Mrs. Abbie C. Borroto. It seems to be agreed that the patient could not have lived more than a matter of hours in any case. But because the doctor had plainly violated the law he was arrested on a warrant charging him with killing Mrs. Borroto "feloniously, willfully and of malice aforethought." To this, Dr. Sander is said to have replied, "It was an act of mercy. There never was any malice in my heart."

That Dr. Sander's motive was entirely benign is indicated by his whole demeanor, by his reputation in the community and by the support that has come to him from his fellow townsmen. The dead woman's husband, Reginald F. Borroto, issued a statement to reporters expressing "complete confidence" in the doctor. In suburban Candia, where he lives, 605 of the town's 650 registered voters signed an affirmation of their "faith" in him. When Dr. Sander is tried by a jury of his peers, no doubt they will take into account the circumstances and the motivation of his act and temper justice with the mercy he seems clearly to deserve.

Nevertheless, it was an awesome responsibility that Dr. Sander assumed. Society can scarcely afford to let physicians exercise this kind of discretion at will. There have been a number of comparable cases in the past several years in which the responsibility was assumed not by a doctor but by a relative of the victim or (if you prefer) the beneficiary of such a mercy killing. Confronted with a crime of this kind, juries have commonly been reluctant to convict. And perhaps, if only because these acts of mercy are committed even though they are criminal, there is a good deal to be said on the side of those who would make them legal when hedged about with reasonable safeguards. A group which styles itself the Euthanasia Society of America, Inc., is now seeking enactment in New Hampshire of the Nation's first "mercy death" law which would permit the mercy killing of incurable sufferers upon their petition and with the recommendation of a medical committee and approval by the courts. This seems at least preferable to condonation of the act by acquittal after a violation of law.

How to Have Civilized War

By Malvina Lindsay

"Practical" Approach

"I CAN'T SEE why Congress is going to waste time hearing those wildcat schemes for world government, or even an Atlantic Union," remarked the eminent self-advertised realist, Mr. Hardpann.

"We've got to try something else besides an armament race—or a hydrogen bomb," replied the publicly advertised visionary, Mr. Stellar.

"No," objected Mr. Hardpann, "what we need now that the Russians have the bomb is a new, hard-headed approach to the whole business. Now I have a plan to put some common sense into war."

"You mean civilize it?"

"Well-er regulate it. We might as well admit we'll never stop it. It all goes back to human nature. And you can't change——"

"Please!" protested Mr. Stellar clapping his hands over his ears, "spare me that one!"

"What I mean, man is the problem. You can't change him."

"Then you'd throw all the world's religions, all its social sciences, a lot of its physical sciences out the window?"

"Well, we've always had war."

"Yes and plagues, pestilences, diseases, vermin—and we're doing something about them."

"LET'S GET back to my plan. As long as we can't do away with war, let's limit it, get all the countries together and draw up a code."

"A gentlemen's agreement?"

"Call it what you please, rules of war have been observed—at least sometimes."

"Yes and broken. What about the Germans' torpedoing of the Lusitania? Then how long did Germany keep its promise not to sink passenger ships without warning? Nine months! What about Hitler's blitzes? The sneak attack on Pearl Harbor? The atom bomb we dropped on Hiroshima? There wasn't any code to regulate that. How would you have codes ready for every new weapon?"

"Of course we'd have to take some chances."

"Then why not take them on what you call peace schemes?"

"They're all too impractical. Now I'm not saying war is inevitable—but, well, just in case, we ought to be doing something to make it as easy as possible."

"How can you make an atomic war easy?"

"There's been a lot of exaggeration about atomic war. It wouldn't destroy everybody—maybe only a few million on each side. Why, the hydrogen bomb would only devastate an area of 60 to 100 square miles.

"What's more," continued Realist Hardpann, "uranium's so scarce bombs wouldn't be wasted on anything but major targets. And if we'd get a law——"

"You mean a world law?"

"I don't like that term. If we'd get a war code saying bombs wouldn't be dropped on cities of over 50,000, then we could decentralize——"

"You mean move most of our population!"

"Yes. The military could take over and do it in no time. However—we might even get a code to outlaw the atom bomb!"

"THEN HOW about a code to outlaw other bombs, say the kind that killed a lot of people in London, Berlin, Stalingrad?"

"We-ell, er-armies would have to have something to fight with."

"Yet if we're going to make this a gentlemanly war, why don't we draw up a code to fight on chargers, like knights, with spears, lances, shields?"

"You forget there's been a lot of progress in weapons since then. Besides we have to be practical."

"You're right And the only way to be completely practical would be to draw up a code for the use of germs and for the so-called 'fantastic weapons' that Congress has appropriated 30 million dollars to develop."

"Those things are all too secret. It wouldn't be practical."

"Then why is it so impractical to do anything about peace schemes—they're not secret."

"I'm suspicious of that fuzzy-minded disarmament stuff. We've never been able to do anything about peace."

"We've never really tried. As Lord Boyd Orr said when he accepted the Nobel peace prize, if we'd spend 1 percent of what we spend on war in helping United Nations agencies to function, we'd remove a lot of the causes of war. That would really be bedrock action."

"That's all visionary. Russia would never keep her promises on any peace plans."

"But I suppose she would if we promised to wage a polite war!"

"Well, anyway, we've got to take some practical action pretty quick—if we want to get war on a humane basis! . . . You know I don't like this flying-saucer business."

"Why, the Air Force investigation proved it a complete visionary delusion——"

"Just the same, I don't like it!"

Mid-Century

The Washington Post is to be congratulated on giving a good coverage of the "middle of the century" perspective (January 1) without foisting upon us in headings or in persistent repetition the erroneous information that it's the twentieth century whose middle we have just passed through.

The hundred years that began with January 1, 1900, which Mark Sullivan's oft-quoted statement said "seems to the eye and sounds to the ear more like the beginning of a century than does January 1, 1901," happens to be a century with such a convenient name of its own that there is no good excuse for misnaming it. "It's the "nineteen hundreds" and not "the twentieth century" whose middle we have just been celebrating. As there is just one year's difference in the meaning of those two terms, we can do some celebrating all over again a year hence, and see if the passing of one more year makes much difference in our perspective.

Some of our confusion results from the fact that we have two different ways of referring to time units numerically. One is by numbering them serially, and the other is by counting the completed units which have elapsed since the beginning.

The latter method is commonly used for time o'clock, as when the middle of the twelfth hour of the day is called 11:30 because of the number of hours and minutes which have elapsed since midnight. For longer time units (on the calendar rather than on the clock) we find it more convenient to use the other method. Father Anno Domini is merely "going on" 1950 during this, his 1950th, year. If we called each year by his last birthday, we would be only in 1949 now, and his initial year which we call the year 1 in the A.D. series would have to be renamed the year 0 A.D.

It might save some mental effort and confusion in translating centuries into years and vice versa if our numbering of centuries were identical with the first digits of the years making up each century, somewhat as rooms 1900, etc., in a large building can be assumed to be on the nineteenth floor (the zero floor being the basement). The years 1900 to 1999 are, however, "the nineteen hundreds," and that is the term we should use when those are the years we really mean.

Admitting DPs

In his letter published December 29, Mr. Elbert R. Sisson mentions that England, Ireland and Scotland have admitted more DPs than the United States.

England, Ireland and Scotland are practically broke, financially and economically in the red, and being supported largely through the goodwill of the United States.

When we get too many people to supply with food, water and jobs here, who is going to support the United States?

F. S. WILSON.

Recent statistics revealing the religious belief of displaced persons entering the United States show those of Catholic faith to be in greater numbers than those of any other church affiliation. Hence it would seem that some tightening of the DP law would be in order in regard to the professed religion of those being permitted to enter here in order that we might prevent the United States from being threatened with a predominantly Catholic population.

Captive Audiences

Suddenly the question of human rights looms large in the transit radio dispute; we are greatly concerned with the propriety of forcing music and advertising on a "captive audience" with the necessity of respecting "minority rights."

Pooh and piffle! Since when have human rights or the rights of a minority been respected here? And aren't all of us in Washington members of a captive audience at the spectacle of a city dominated by the ubiquitous evils of votelessness?

WARREN BLANDING.
Washington.

Nothing is more indicative of the retrogression of the age than the attempt to have radios operating in the Washington street busses. Rather than have peoples' ears bombarded with bebop music and annoying insistent commercial advertising, the Capitol City's newspapers should start a campaign to get people to read their daily sheets, magazines, books, or anything rather than sit idly as they ride. The cars run so smoothly in Washington it is a wonderful opportunity to peruse all reading matter

"Navy Promotions"

Your December 31 editorial "Navy Promotions" is excellent, a result of objective observation, the quotes around "merit" system significant.

Is it not obvious from the behavior of present admirals in the current controversy that a clique system is used for promotion rather than one based on merit? Men worthy of flag rank would behave differently.

Naval officers truly dedicated to protect their country, and who believe that they are in service are repeatedly passed over or belatedly promoted in the present clique system.

Kin On Payrolls

You give quite a space in your issue of December 31 to a story, "Congressmen Have Kin on Payroll." I have in the past 50 years had vast dealings with the Congress, and I have found it to be a very busy delegation of men. I have found, too, that relatives as clerks in the office of members are as a rule very helpful to the public seeking advice about many public questions. As a rule, members of the family know how the Congressman feels about the many questions that arise. I have found the wives of many Congressmen good administrators and more helpful than someone seeking a political job.

Most members of Congress are poor men, and they have a tight squeeze to make ends meet. They have to donate to every church that is built in their district and in fact to every money-raising campaign that comes up. I think that this criticism is very unjust.

Einstein's Universal Law

While possessing only a relatively limited knowledge of Professor Einstein's work, I feel I must call attention to some vital errors in James E. Cassidy's appraisal of it in your issue of December 30.

Mr. Cassidy: When Professor Einstein . . . brought out a theory that there was one universal law which governs gravitation and other matters, he was not expounding anything new, as such a conclusion had been reached untold millenniums ago.

In reply: Probably true, but Einstein certainly never claimed credit for formulation of this conclusion, as is implied. He has been attempting to prove it, which is an entirely different matter. A conclusion lies in the realm of nonsense until it has been proved.

Mr. Cassidy: Notwithstanding mathematical formulae used to try and prove the existence of a fourth dimension, it does not exist . . . The disclosure of the make-up of the atom has partially explained the "mystery" which Einstein concluded was a fourth dimension.

In reply: First, it is reasonable to allow Einstein himself to reply to this criticism. In his paper, The Meaning of Relativity, he states: ". . . the laws of nature will assume a form which is logically most satisfactory when expressed as laws in the four-dimensional space-time continuum . . . We have far less success in picturing to ourselves relations in this four-dimensional continuum than in the three-dimensional Euclidean continuum; but it must be emphasized that even in the Euclidean three-dimensional geometry its concepts and relations are only of an abstract nature in our minds, and are not at all identical with the images we form visually and through our sense of touch." (Italics mine.)

One need not know the exact definition of such terms as continuum to see the point that Einstein is making. He says he is looking for the clearest means with which to express new ideas, and convenience dictates that he describe phenomena by telling not only where they occur (accomplished by the use of the conventional three dimensions), but also when they occur (hence the use of time, the so-called fourth dimension).

One of the world's leading mathematicians, Edward Kasner, helps clarify this point in his illuminating Mathematics and the Imagination: ". . . there is no proof, in the scientific sense, that space is three-dimensional, or for that matter, that it is four-, five-, six-, or anything but n-dimensional . . . All that we have learned from applied mathematics is that it is convenient, but not obligatory to consider the space of our sense perceptions as three-dimensional." (Italics mine.)

Mr. Cassidy: His latest theory as to the existence of a single force dealing with all material things is sound, but not new. It does not take either science or mathematics to prove this. Every phase of nature, whether on the earth or in the sky, provides ample proof. (Italics mine.)

In reply: Mathematics will certainly not prove this, it is true, for any relation mathematics has to the physical universe is but a convenient coincidence.

But how to prove it without science is a mystery to me! Perhaps Mr. Cassidy is saying that we possess an intuitive knowledge of the fact, but I, for one, don't. And if this is what he means, then science gets lost in a metaphysical shuffle with rationalism in which you pays your money and you takes your choice between the two. Einstein has chosen science. To argue against his conclusions your reasoning must be scientific.

On the other hand, if "every phase of nature . . . provides ample proof," does this not imply observations and interpretation, in other words, the method of science?

Move To The Rear

Months ago in your paper a correspondent offered a suggestion on transit radio which I thought deserved more consideration than seemed to have been given it. It was to leave the rear portion of the buses and streetcars without speakers which would not only provide refuge for those annoyed but would obviate the need for the operator to request the passengers to move to the rear. Those who enjoy the music would not be deprived, congestion at the doors would be relieved.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Handing Down State

Lippmann

MR. CLARK CLIFFORD must be right, and not merely modest, loyal, and self-effacing, when he says that in its final for. the President's message is Mr. Truman's own work. For no ghost writer, unless he happened to be a dramatist of great genius, could have written a speech like this one for Mr. Truman to read, and have made it sound as if Mr. Truman meant it. The serenity, the perfect optimism, the relaxing confidence, could not be the mood of any subordinate, doomed to struggle with the hard facts of administration and of politics. They belong uniquely to a man who is sitting on top of the world and finds it comfortable and pleasant up there above the turmoil and the hullabaloo.

There is an undeniable charm about it, rather like that of noontime on a summer day when the air is soft and still, the sky is blue, and there are no long shadows. Then everything seems possible because nothing is entirely real. For an hour or two at least the worriers like Mr. Taft and Mr. Knowland will find it hard to be angry and righteously indignant and ideologically hot and bothered. For here, as the poet said, they are transported briefly "where all trouble seems, dead winds and spent waves riot, in doubtful dreams of dreams."

A CLOSER study of Mr. Truman's poetic style shows that his technique is never to deal with problems but only with the excellent results that would be achieved if the problems had been solved. That is a good way to make this sorry world look easy. By the simple device of announcing only goals, objectives, and ends, in terms so general that absolutely no one can question them, the controversies about ways and means, which are the subject matter of almost all the struggles of life, disappear from sight. Mr. Truman has an enormous legislative program which, if it is enacted, will make a sizeable volume of new laws. But what he discusses in this message are not the laws he calls for but only the preambles to those laws.

It is, in fact, not strictly accurate to say that he discusses the preamble. His message is more like a table of contents of a book which names the topics that might be treated. Nothing is explained. Nothing is argued. Nothing is proved. Nothing is demonstrated. The text is a series of short declarative sentences which are merely asserted as if they were all equally true and self-evident. They do not meet criticism. They merely bypass it, leaving the panting critic no target to shoot at, no antagonist to get hold of, only the thin air to thrash around in. No wonder so many Republican politicians exhibit the symptoms of being on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

WHETHER this method, granting its political effectiveness, is also democratic—with a small "d"—is a nice question. Undoubtedly Mr. Truman is for the people, sincerely, warmly, and persistently. But amidst all the things he tells them they need and desire and that he wishes to give them, there is one thing that he does not, I think, give them. That is government by the people—the experience of understanding and helping to decide how they are to get the things they are to get. They are denied that experience, which enables a people to grow in knowledge of self-government, when their leader talks only about what is desirable and does not discuss candidly and fully how it is to be achieved.

MR. TRUMAN is no autocrat, far from it. But he is a man of his epoch, and in this epoch there is no phenomenon so alarming the wide world over as governments which are coming to depend on the votes of great masses following leaders who tell the people what they want without permitting them or compelling them to face the issues of how to provide them with what they want. Not the "handout state" but the "handing down state" is the enemy of genuine progress in the endless business of learning democractic self-government.

It is not wrong, on the contrary it is quite right, that a nation should spend increasing portions of its increasing product on public utilities and public services. But this can become quite vicious if the welfare state is promoted by the votes of masses of men who are made conscious only of the desirable good things and are not troubled by the problems of conducting a government that must provide the good things.

FOR THEN, as Macaulay said nearly a century ago, the ship of state is all sails and no anchor. That is why Mr. Truman's method of asserting a series of goals, of dealing with ends rather than with ways and means, of plumping for the preambles without explaining or discussing the substantive issues, is more than a matter of rhetoric and literary style. It is something which raises questions that go to the roots of the democratic philosophy itself.

Disgruntled Farmers

By Marquis Childs

Falling Prices And Political Fences

Childs

THE THEME song of President Truman and his victorious party is success—bigger and better and as inevitable as the sun and the rain. The theme runs through all the messages and reports heralding the return of Congress and the start of the new year.

A great deal of supporting evidence can be marshaled to show that Truman is in the White House and that, therefore, all is right, if not with the world, then with this country. On this rosy horizon there is, however, one cloud that the official appraisers either have not detected or have chosen to ignore.

That is the drop in the price of many farm products. This rapid drop has stirred a slowly gathering storm of protest in the Midwest. Significantly enough, the protests are coming from the voters in Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Ohio and Illinois who did more than any other single group to give Truman his '48 victory.

One of the few Democrats who has waked up to the meaning of this protest and the threat it contains is Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota. Humphrey has given Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan some strong words of advice about what must, in Humphrey's opinion, be done and done at once.

MINNESOTA has a highly diversified agriculture, with emphasis on dairy and poultry products. The farm bill passed by the present Congress at its last session put a high support price under corn—the raw material that goes into hogs, poultry and cattle. But that same law, in effect, left hogs, poultry and cattle out from under the support umbrella. Thus the poultry farmer must pay dearly for his feed, thanks to support prices on corn and wheat, while he sells his product in a falling market.

Humphrey has received hundreds of letters and telegrams from every part of the State. The following are typical:

"Where is egg support you promised us farmers? Sold my eggs today at 20 cents per dozen."

"Am holding my eggs on farm for higher prices. When does new support program take effect? Eggs 20 cents here."

"We just can't buy high-priced machinery with only 20-cent egg prices. Where is Government support? If you are not going to support eggs junk rest of support program, too."

This last makes two vital points. First is the growing disparity between the prices of what the farmer has to sell and the machinery, fencing, fuel oil and so forth he must buy to keep on producing. In the Midwest, farm prices are down on the average for all commodities 52 percent while farm supplies are up 26 percent.

Second is the sense of injustice increasingly felt by farmers of raising crops not protected by the new law. They see the corn and wheat farmers, including big operators living in the towns who do a kind of factory-farming with large combines, subsidized by Washington while the family farm where a lot of labor goes into specialty crops is left out in the cold.

THE TELEGRAMS and letters are coming from most of the farm States. One thing they show is that the farmers do not understand the new law and that goes for a lot of people in Washington. It provides that other crops than those specified can be supported at varying levels at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture. But the same Congress that passed that law failed to provide money to support these other crops.

The man who is caught in the middle of this squeeze is Secretary Brannan. Senator Clinton Anderson of New Mexico, Brannan's predecessor had a lot to do with the adoption of the new law. As one of Anderson's colleagues put it:

"It looks as though Clint had slipped poor old Charlie a political Mickey Finn. He's damned if he does, and he's damned if he doesn't."

But the political Mickey Finn, if that is what it was, could have consequences for the Democratic Party far more serious than the fate of a Secretary of Agriculture. Brannan has announced support prices for eggs but the announcement was phrased in such a way as to be difficult or impossible to understand, and it was full of reservations.

Senators are to be elected this fall in Ohio, Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Kansas and South and North Dakota. The farm vote is vital in those States. While it might not mean the difference between defeat and victory in the congressional elections this fall, it could swing the balance in 1952.

Defense Seeks to Impeach Testimony of Mrs. Chambers

New York, Jan. 4 (NYHT).—Defense counsel at the second perjury trial of Alger Hiss today interrupted the testimony of Mrs. Priscilla Hiss, wife of the defendant, to present two new character witnesses and renew their efforts to impeach the testimony of Mrs. Whittaker Chambers.

Mrs. Hiss testified under cross-examination for two hours today, her third day on the stand, and is expected to return to the stand tomorrow. She described in detail how she spent $400 on house furnishings in 1937, but could not remember the exact prices of any items. She said she had thrown away a picture of her stepson, Timothy Hobson, painted by Mrs. Chambers, because it was "an unflattering portrait of a pleasant child, with a lot of yellow paint and a green face."

She said she had never had any paper in her house like that on which 65 documents in the case were typed, and she did not think she had ever seen that kind of paper. She said it looked like the kind of tissue paper used in dress boxes. Assistant United States Attorney Thomas F. Murphy told her it was the usual kind of flimsy paper used by stenographers for making carbon copies.

Hiss is on trial for perjury as a result of denying that he ever gave these typed documents or any other secret Government document sor copies to Whittaker Chambers for the use of a Communist spy ring. The testimony of Chambers was supported by that of his wife, who described a long and intimate friendship between the two families. Mr. and Mrs. Hiss denied that any such friendship existed and contradicted most of the accounts given by Mrs. Chambers of meetings of the two couples.

It was the testimony by Mrs. Chambers that defense counsel Claude B. Cross tried to impeach today. He used a roundabout method involving testimony by William L. Marbury, counsel for Hiss in the libel suit brought by Hill against Chambers.

Marbury described in detail on the witness stand how Hiss sued Chambers in September, 1948, for making the allegations which became the basis of the indctment against Hiss in December, 1948. He related that he had questioned Mr. and Mrs. Chambers in Baltimore in November, 1948, in connection with this suit, and again in March, 1949, after the Government had unsuccessfully sought to have the questioning stopped.

Cross then asked Marbury if Mrs. Chambers had said at that time anything about visiting Mr. and Mrs. Hiss in their home on 13th st., Washington. Murphy strenuously objected. Cross said his purpose was to impeach the testimony of Mrs. Chambers, who during this trial described such visits. He read from the record to show that he had asked Mrs. Chambers if she had mentioned the 13th st. visit when she was questioned in Baltimore, and she had said: "I believe I did."

Murphy renewed his objections, but Judge Henry Goddard overruled him. Marbury said she had not mentioned a visit to him.

On cross-examination Murphy said: "Did you ask her about visiting at 30th st?" Marbury said he had asked her to describe all her contacts with the Hisses. Murphy handed him the bulky transcript of the Baltimore questioning—which had lasted 1½ days—and said: "Show me where you asked that question."

Marbury said that it would take him time to find it. It was then 4:20 p. m., and Judge Goddard adjourned court until 10:30 a. m. Thursday.

Marbury had previously testified that Hiss' reputation for loyalty, veracity, and integrity was "excellent." Clyde Eagleton, professor of international law at New York University, said he had "heard nothing but praise "of Hiss" before the perjury trial.

Esther D. Auld, State Department employe, testified about the routing of documents in the department, and Matthew C. Earle, courier for the passport division, brought records concerning the passport issued to Chambers under the name of David Breen in 1935.

Judge Sees FBI Wiretapping Giving Tips on Judy's Trips

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan said today the FBI apparently learned of Judith Coplon's plans for trips from Washington to New York by tapping her private telephone.

Her lawyer, Archibald Palmer, repeatedly has contended the Government got the information by wiretapping. Under Federal law such information cannot be used as evidence. The Government admits tapping her wires but insists other "confidential information" first put the FBI on Miss Coplon's trail.

The judge's statement came during a hearing on a defense motion to quash the spy conspiracy indictment against Miss Coplon, on grounds it is based on wiretapping evidence. Judge Ryan said he had read 320 pages of transcripts of intercepted telephone conversations from Miss Coplon's Washington home indicating "the Government had advance knowledge" of three trips made to New York by Miss Coplon.

The last trip, on March 4, ended in her arrest with Valentin A. Gubitchev, Russian engineer. The judge obtained agreement from Palmer and Gubitchev's attorney, Abraham L. Pomerantz, that the recordings of the intercepted telephone calls be played later at an unspecified time.

He also asked for a new recording of Miss Coplon's voice for comparison with the FBI recordings. He instructed Raymond P. Whearty, special assistant to the Attorney General to see if arrangements for the recording could be made. But later Whearty asked to be "relieved" of that duty and the matter was left in the air.

Continuing his fight to establish that Gubitchev should not be tried because he has diplomatic immunity, Pomerantz said Secretary of State Dean Acheson's statement that Gubitchev was no longer a member of the Russian U. N. delegation when he was arrested "failed to give the answer."

He said the immunity plea was based on the fact that "Gubitchev was and continues to be third secretary of the Soviet Ministry of Foreign Affairs." Whearty countered that documents in Gubitchev's possession when arrested indicated his employment as third secretary of the Soviet ministry ended in July 1946.

Witness Says He Saw Bridges At Communist Party Session

San Francisco, Jan. 4 (AP).—A new Government witness testified today he saw Harry Bridges at three "closed" Communist Party meetings, and again at Communist Party headquarters in San Francisco.

Bridges, head of the CIO Longshoremen's Union, is on trial for perjury, accused of falsely swearing he was not a Communist at his 1945 naturalization hearing, and had never been a Communist.

The witness was Lawrence Ross, 46, who said he was a paid functionary of the Communist Party from 1932 to 1937. He testified he has been a newspaperman since around 1925, and presently is managing editor of a trade paper in Memphis, Tenn.

Ross said he saw Bridges in Communist Party headquarters here in the early fall of 1936. He remembered it well, he stated, because "I had a feeling almost amounting to shocked surprise, that Harry Bridges was present."

Defense Attorney James MacInnis objected vigorously but the court permitted Ross to answer a prosecution question as to why he was surprised. It was, he said, "because there had been so many precautions taken to conceal his identity" in connection with the Communist Party "that I was surprised to see him at Communist Party headquarters."

The headquarters session was a closed "Communist meeting," he testified, at which Bridges "made a report of an hour—perhaps longer—about the situation on the waterfront and the advisability of preparing for a strike."

The other meetings at which he saw Bridges, he declared, also were "closed" Communist gatherings.

At a national convention of the Communist Party opening June 24, 1936, in the Manhattan Opera House, New York City, he said "Comrade Rossi—who was Harry Bridges" was among those nominated for membership on the Communist central committee.

Other prosecution witnesses had testified Bridges used "Rossi" as a party name.

Horn-Rimmed Glasses Give Taft a New Look

NYHT News Service

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) appeared yesterday on the Senate ood with a new look—optically speaking.

The Ohio Republican, who always has worn rimless eyeglasses with the metal earpieces, exhibited a new pair of dark, horn-rimmed glasses.

The switch resulted because a friend recently remarked to the Senator that the rimless type made him look too school-teacher-ish The Senator and his office staff decided the friend was right.

ICC Ruling Made On Sightseeing Mt. Vernon Cars

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday ruled that sightseeing limousines do not need an ICC permit to operate between Washington and Mount Vernon, provided they carry no more than six passengers, or have been licensed in Virginia and the District.

The ruling ends a year long investigation launched by the ICC after bus companies licensed to operate between the two points had complained that the limousines were cutting into their business.

The ICC adopted the findings of Examiner Tobias Naftalin. He conducted a hearing last April to determine whether the ICC had jurisdiction over the Washington-Mount Vernon sightseeing business.

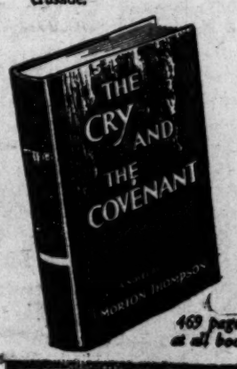
THE CRY AND THE COVENANT

by MORTON THOMPSON

The story of the only doctor in the world who so loved women that he dedicated his life to stamping out the mysterious disease that turned Europe's great hospitals into deathtraps for mothers and children. His story is a powerful book filled with the inspiration of an unselfishly dedicated life and the warm joy of a completely happy marriage. You will never forget the brave, persistent doctor from Hungary and his great crusade.



"The first novel truly to describe medical discovery . . . An event in literary history . . . I read it with a catch in my throat." —PAUL DE KRUIF, N.Y. Times Book Review

"This is a work of genius." —Chicago News

"Modern women will read it with a deep sense of gratitude." —Cleveland Press

"The courageous, inspirational story of a noble man." —Boston Post

"The moving story of one of history's greatest doctors." —Chicago Tribune

D. C. Deposits Up 47 Million Since June 30

By S. Oliver Goodman

Combined deposits of Washington's 19 banks increased $17,562,398 in the past year, a survey by The Washington Post showed last night.

The aggregate of $1,037,828,185 at year end was the second best on record here, being exceeded only by the $1,060,370,000 at the end of 1945.

Rallying strongly in the last six months of 1949, deposits advanced $46,831,700 since June 30. The ups and downs of the year are reflected in these deposit totals as of five call dates (anticipating the usual call by the Comptroller of Currency for statements of conditions as of the past year end):

December 31, 1949	$1,037,828,185
November 1, 1949	1,005,460,914
June 30, 1949	990,996,485
April 11, 1949	1,022,130,959
December 31, 1949	1,020,265,787

Bulk of the year's increase, it will be noted, came in the last two months when deposits jumped $32,367,271. Sixteen of the 19 banks showed increases in this period.

Over the 12-month period, 12 institutions displayed deposit gains. Highlight was the 170 percent leap at National Bank of Washington, whose deposits of $60,924,652 at year end compared with $22,610,346 last year.

(Stock control of the Bank of Washington, oldest bank in the city, changed hands during the year. Although official confirmation is lacking, John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers Union is believed to hold the controlling interest. A commonly accepted theory is that the UMW has placed about $5 million dollars of its pension fund on deposit at the Bank of Washington in order to obtain a good return through investments.)

Other banks which have shown appreciable deposit gains during the past year included American Security & Trust Co., up 13 million; Hamilton National Bank, up 7 million; Washington Loan & Trust Co., up 3 million; National Capital Bank, up $2,700,000; Liberty National, up 2 million, and City Bank, up 1½ million.

Following are individual banks' deposits as of December 31, 1949, and the previous call date:

OPTIMISTIC: President Ralph S. Damon of Trans World Airline said yesterday that "signs indicate 1950 will be an even better year for air travel than 1949." His optimism for 1950, the TWA head said, was qualified with the provision that the industry "be able to depend upon a stable regulatory policy from Congress and the Civil Aeronautics Board."

WHO'S WHO TODAY: W. C. Power has been appointed advertising manager of Chevrolet Motor, succeeding Charles J. French who was elevated to national public relations manager . . . Edward Sellers, director of the FM Association, will go with the National Association of Broadcasters as head of the N. A. B.'s new FM division . . . Kenneth A. Maass has become field sales manager in the Washington headquarters of the Bureau of National Affairs, Inc., publishers of Government-business reports and books . . . Jack Mankey has resigned as a public relations aide of the American Trucking Associations, Inc., to form a public relations firm here . . . Lawrence B. Richardson, former president of Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corp., has been appointed its research director.

N. Y. Sun Sold To World Telegram

New York, Jan. 4 (AP)—The New York Sun, famous 116-year-old newspaper, ceased publication today. It was sold to an afternoon rival, the World-Telegram.

Roy Howard, editor and president of the New York World-Telegram and president of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, announced that, beginning Thursday his newspaper would be known as "The World Telegram and the Sun."

The transaction was regarded as the most important move in the New York newspaper field since the merger of the World and the Telegram in 1931.

The Sun had about 1200 employes. A Sun spokesman said they would receive severance pay.

"Mounting costs of production" were blamed by Thomas W. Dewart, president and publisher of the Sun, for the sale.

Dewart said that over the last 10-year period, "the average advance in individual pay of the Sun's employes was 80.4 percent. In the same period, the price of newsprint rose from $48 to $100 a ton."

Leaders of five unions representing 817 employes of the Sun took an opposite view.

"The management never made any plea for cooperation along the lines of economy," declared Harvey Call, president of the Sun Editorial Union (Independent), claiming 175 members. "I would say it was a business casualty rather than any fault of the union."

Washington Bureau Will Close on Friday

The Washington bureau of the New York Sun, in the Munsey bldg., is expected to close Friday as result of purchase of the Sun by the New York World-Telegram.

Phelps H. Adams, chief of the bureau here, said he expects it to be closed. He said he does not yet know what he and the other bureau members, L. Edgar Prima and Edward A. Conroy, will do. He said, however, the Sun management is "making every effort" to help "all of us on the Sun staff."

World-Telegram correspondent in Washington is Roger W. Stuart, who has offices in the Scripps-Howard chain headquarters at 1013 13th st. nw.

Mates Exchanged, Couples Settle in Adjacent Houses

Los Angeles, Jan. 4 (AP).—Two couples, who exchanged mates after divorces at Las Vegas, Nev., Saturday, reestablished housekeeping next door to each other today, with appropriate reshuffling.

They are Howard W. Moore, 35, auto parts store manager, and his bride, Frances, 39; and David J. Hardy, 41, and his bride, Leno, 29.

They have been neighbors for five years. The two women went to Las Vegas for divorces, each on the ground of cruelty. Then each married the other's former husband, in separate ceremonies.

The divorces included joint custody of three children involved, Raymond Dean Moore, 10; Thomas Wesley Moore, 5, and Douglas James Hardy, 7.

Dewey Rakes Administration On Outlay, Welfare Programs

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey raked the Truman Administration's welfare and spending programs as leading toward a socialistic state today in far stronger language than any he used in the 1948 Presidential campaign.

Opening the 1950 session of the New York State Legislature, Dewey accused the Fair Deal of mismanagement of domestic affairs and an infringement on the rights of States.

He placed the record of his seven years as governor before the people as a challenge to the Fair Deal's "socialized medicine" program and said New Yorkers had achieved the highest health and welfare standards in the world "without any taint of socialism."

The twice-defeated GOP presidential nominee said this had been done "without regimentation or compulsion — without borrowing from fascism, communism or socialism."

The national Administration, he added, was trying to "hide its bad management of domestic affairs behind the skirts of international and defense requirements."

"The rgihts and responsibilities of the people of our States are being nullified by the voracious appetites of the Federal budget," he said.

Reaction to the 6000-word opening message was swift. Republicans praised Dewey's statement as an accounting of a "great administration," while Democrats branded it "an admission of failure."

French End Rationing

Paris, Jan. 4 (AP).—Food rationing in France ended today with a cabinet decision to allow free sale of coffee. Coffee was the last item still rationed.

Foreign Service Merger Is Being Studied

Secretary Acheson has appointed a committee to recommend whether, and to what extent, to merge the career Foreign Service and the departmental service in the State Departmnt.

Chairman of the committee, the department announced yesterday, will be James H. Rowe, former Assistant Attorney General and more recently a member, with Acheson, of the Hoover Commission on the reorganization of the executive branch of the Government.

Rowe's committee colleagues will be former Representative Robert Ramspeck of Georgia, for years the foremost champion of the civil service on Capitol Hill, and William E. DeCourcy, Ambassador to Haiti, a veteran of 28 years in the Foreign Service.

Long a Controversial Issue

A possible merger of the two State Department personnel services has long been a controversial issue within the department. The Hoover commission recommended that the two be pulled together over a period of two years into a single service.

Career officials generally have been deeply suspicious of the idea —so much so that Acheson and his assistants have moved in gingerly fashion in dealing with it.

Charles M. Hulten, deputy Assistant Secretary in charge of administration, yesterday said the new committee would not be bound in advance by the Hoover commission's findings. Its first job, he said, will be to decide whether the Hoover group's proposal for a gradual merger should be carried out.

Recommendations Hoped For

An official statement also expressed the hope that the new committee could recommend:

"(1) Any change it may feel is required in the existing classified personnel system of the department or the career system of the Foreign Service; (2) any action that it feels will bring about a closer integration of the two systems, and (3) any action that will contribute to the morale of he personnel concerned."

The department hopes fro committee recommendations "as early as possible this year," the statement said, but "the time factor is, however, a secondary one."

William Howell, the World Bank's deputy director for administration, will be staff director of the Rowe committee.

Falls Church Charter To Be Aired Jan. 13

A public hearing on the proposed new city-manager-plan charter for Falls Church will take place at 7 p. m. January 13, city officials announced yesterday. The hearing will be at the Madison School on N. Washington st.

Members of the city council, who must aprove or disapprove the document, have agreed not to take action until after the public hearing. If they approve it, then it must be voted by the Virginia General Assembly before it becomes law.

Pair Accused Of Stealing 17 Rifles Here

Two men accused of stealing 17 rifles and 10 shotguns from a freight shipment at the Eckington Yards appeared yesterday before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, who continued their hearing until next Wednesday.

They were released in $1500 bond each.

Charged with grand larceny, they are Gordon A. Francis, 36, of 3314 Chauncey pl., Mount Rainier, Md., and Ronald H. Leeper, 30, of 4509 South Capitol st.

Both men, police said, are employes of the Jacobs Transfer Co. Francis is a supervisor and Leeper a truck dispatcher.

According to Detective Sergts. Ben Clark and David Slattery of the general assignment squad, a shipment of guns from the Winchester Arms Co. in Connecticut was delivered to the Jacobs Co. freight loading platform in the Eckington Yards on December 7.

When the Fetterman Hardware Store, 52 H st. nw., wrote to the Winchester Co. to complain the shipment had not been received, an investigation was begun. The theft was reported to Metropolitan Police December 21 and Francis and Leeper were arrested nine days later.

Police said the pair admitted the theft and that 25 of the missing weapons were recovered by the FBI in a 14th st. nw., apartment occupied by a friend of one of the men. Another weapon was recovered in Waverly Va.

Judge Orders Extortion Trial to Start

Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday ruled that Joseph R. Roth, 40-year-old stationary clerk, is capable of preparing his defense to charges of attempting a $225,000 extortion.

The District Court jurist adjudged Roth of sound mind after four psychiatrists split evenly on the question of whether Roth is deranged.

The Government sought to have Roth declared unfit for trial because of insanity, even though he has yet to be indicted by a grand jury on the charge.

Roth was accused by the Government of seeking to extort $200,000 from Sherman Fairchild, New York airplane manufacturer, and $25,000 from A. J. Eckhardt, of Baldwin, N. Y..

Roth was a wartime inspector and Eckhardt was his superior at the time at a Fairchild plant.

On the witness stand, Roth admitted yesterday that he had written the letters and said he was sorry about the whole thing.

"I was motivated by the feeling that as a patriotic American I had to expose some frauds," he testified. He had claimed the Government had been swindled in its Air Force program.

Dr. Amino Perretti and Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert both testified they believed Roth to be "paranoid." Dr. Benjamin Karpman and Dr. Frank Caprio said that Roth was sane.

Bond was set at $20,000 pending grand jury action.

Eisenhower Nominated 'Man of Half-Century'

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Isenhower was nominated today as the man of the half-century by Brig Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, president of the United Nations General Assembly.

He made the nomination at the annual fund drive of the Greater New York Council of Boy Scouts.

With Shirley Povich

NAVY IS REACHING across the continent and into the pro football ranks to come up with Eddie Erdelatz as its new head coach. It could be the dawn of some professional thinking by the academy people with respect to its football department. And high time.

In Ederlatz, the academy apparently would be making a bright choice. With the San Francisco Forty-Niners, he was an important figure as Buck Shaw's assistant. The Forty-Niners were always powerful in the line, Erdelatz's particular coaching department, and it is axiomatic that a coach profits from professional experience.

POVICH

At Navy, Erdelatz would be trodding familiar ground. For three years he was an assistant to Head Coaches Oscar Hagberg and Tom Hamilton, and walked out voluntarily when George Sauer replaced Hamilton, despite an invitation by Navy to stay on. Erdelatz surmised that Sauer would prefer to choose his own assistants.

If Erdelatz gets anything less than the same deal on picking his own aides, Navy won't be doing the right thing by him. It would be an unfair check-rein, and another manifestation of Navy's curbs on its coaches.

SAUER DIDN'T want to leave the Navy job, but he had little choice after the tawdry treatment of his assistants, Bob Ingalls and Vic Bradford, the two men he had brought along with him from Kansas. True enough they signed only two-year contracts while Sauer was working under a four-year pact, but he presumed that they would be kept on as long as he liked. That's traditional.

Navy didn't fire Sauer, but they virtually invited him to quit when they refused to renew the contracts of Ingalls and Bradford. It was the sort of tactic that would leave coaches wary of taking the Navy job, and it is presumed that Erdelatz is making certain that he will have a free hand with his aides. He intends to bring his chief assistant with him from the Forty-Niners and give the academy more of the flavor of professional coaching.

It is related that Navy soured on Sauer with the 38-0 defeat in the last Army game, the worst Navy beating in the long series, but actually Sauer had heard of a movement to shake up the coaching staff in mid-season. He discounted reports that string-pullers had other plans for the 1950 coaching job, but he is impressed now with the fact that they were all too true and that he was not considered indispensable.

THE COMPLAINTS about Navy football are not all on the side of the athletic bosses. The coaches, including Hamilton and Sauer and their assistants, have long been squawking that Navy's procurers and alumni talent scouts have been getting only the fourth-rate culls from prep school ranks after other schools have passed them over. At the same time, the coaches were saddled with back-breaking schedules second only to Notre Dame's.

And it is a fact that Navy's football manpower in recent years has not been impressive. Both Hamilton and Sauer were forced to work with lads who measured up as little more than scat-backs, compared to the brawn of their opponents. The procurers failed signally in interesting nice, big football players in matriculating at Navy.

On the inevitable other hand, Navy's procurers have been up against it. The tackle that Michigan gets may be a 260-pounder, and an incipient All-American, but Navy couldn't use him. He's too big to meet academy specifications. And unless he has 20-20 vision, the only way he can get to Annapolis is with a visitor's pass.

NAVY'S THUS isn't the softest coaching berth in the world, far from it, but good coaching would help the situation. Ederlatz is a T-formation man, coming off a pro team that was one of the best in the business, but the T-system is not the solution to Navy's troubles. As Lou Little used to say, "the best system is the human system that carries 200 pounds or more, has a lot of leg drive, is smart, and likes to play football."

If Ederlatz takes the Navy job, he may be moving in at the most propitious moment in recent Annapolis history, however. He will have going for him an impressive plebe team of last season that was licked only once, and that by a one-point margin. Rip Miller, Navy's contact man, had promised the school a good football team by 1950, and fulfillment may be in prospect next season.

Erdelatz, Navy Talk And Talk; That's All

Annapolis, Jan. 4—Eddie Erdelatz yesterday conferred for four hours with Capt. Howard Caldwell, Naval Academy athletic director, about the football coaching job which has been offered him.

Afterward, Captain Caldwell said they had spoken in generalities, and that they would get down to particulars at another 9 a. m. conference tomorrow.

"We're being very deliberate in our action. We plan to cover the field thoroughly in our interview with Erdelatz," said Caldwell.

Erdelatz agreed, saying, "Captain Caldwell seems to be in no hurry and neither am I. I am prepared to stay here for long conferences."

Discuss Material, System

Erdelatz, former Naval Academy coach, who last year was an assistant for the San Francisco 49ers of the All-America Conference, flew to Washington yesterday from San Francisco. He was met in Washington by Captain Caldwell. The two drove to Annapolis and began their conference here.

Also in on the conference were E. E. (Rip) Miller, assistant director of athletics, and Comdr. R. E. (Dusty) Dornin, executive officer of the Naval Acamedy Athletic Association.

According to Caldwell, they spoke about the player material, the practice facilities, and last year's record.

Erdelatz was especially interested in Navy material—what men will be back from the 1949 team, and what players are coming up from the Plebes, who lost only one game last season. End Coach Ben they watched films of several Navy games last season.

Talk Terms Today

"We did not discuss terms of a contract," said Caldwell, "nor did we talk about assistants."

It was Navy's firing of assistant coaches Bob Ingalls and Vic Bradford last week, which brought about the angry resignation of Head Coach George Sauer.

Erdelatz is scheduled to confer with Marin, Ray Swartz, assistant coach; Frank Foster, junior varsity coach, and Comdr. Asbury (Red) Coward, plebe coach, sometime tomorrow. They are also expected to discuss contract matters.

Erdelatz was reported to have a three-year contract with the 49ers when he went to coach two years ago after leaving Navy. He left the Academy when Sauer, the man he may succeed, came in.

Erdelatz was invited Monday to the first interview.

Giants Sign McCormick

New York, Jan. 4 (AP)—Outfielder Mike McCormick, released by Brooklyn after the World Series, has caught on with the New York Giants.

Horace Stoneham, Giants' president, announced the signing of the veteran National Leaguer as he dropped player contracts in the mail box today.

The Giants sent out 43 contracts, counting four to the reinstated Mexican jumpers—Sal Maglie, Ace Adams, Roy Zimmerman and Nap Reyes. These men do not count under the 40-player limit until they have been given a trial.

McCormick saw part time service with the Dodgers last season, hitting only .209 in 55 games. In 1948 he was a .303-hitting regular with the pennant winning Boston Braves.

The 32-year-old Californian has a lifetime National League average of .283. Except for three years in the Navy during the war, McCormick has been in the National League since he came up to Cincinnati in 1940. The Reds sold him to Boston in mid-1946 and the Braves traded him to the Dodgers for Pete Reiser, December 15, 1948.

Oklahoma City Holds Vote to Drop Football

Oklahoma City, Jan. 4 (AP).—Dr. C. Q. Smith, president of Oklahoma City University, said today he has recommended that football be discontinued at Oklahoma City University but said no official action has been taken by school officials.

It was reported earlier today that OCU Football Coach Orv Tuttle had called a squad meeting for tomorrow and that it was believed he will announce the abandonment of the sport.

OCU discontinued football during the war years, but re-entered competition in 1946. The school won 10 of 11 games in 1946 under Bo Rowland, now coach at George Washington University. Last season, OCU won two out of 10.

Smith said he has recommended to the board of trustees that football be dropped:

"First, because we are handicapped for lack of a stadium which has made scheduling very difficult. As a result we've been losing money. The loss this year will be about $25,000.

He estimated the loss since football was resumed here in 1946 at about $100,000.

Because he felt "we are unable to carry such a deficit," Smith said, he recommended that "we discontinue football for the present."

Smith said a poll of the members of the board of trustees on whether to continue football has not been completed.

High Schools Vote To Run With Fumbled Football

Portland, Orge., Jan. 4 (AP).—High school football teams through the Nation will be able to run with a fumbled ball next season as a safety measure.

Tom Piggott, secretary-treasurer of the Oregon School Activities Association, said the free fumble has been adopted by the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations.

(The Washington public high schools, though not members of the federation, abide by its rules.)

The federation, meeting in Los Angeles, changed prep football rules after hearing the results of Oregon's three-year experiment with the free fumble. Oregon coaches reported that injuries in running back fumbles were less than occurred in pile-ups on the loose ball. They recommended national adoption of the free fumble.

Loyola Rally Whips A. U.

Baltimore, Jan. 4.—Loyola of Baltimore rallied in the last five minutes to defeat American University, 50-44, here tonight.

American led until five minutes were left. Then a layup by Herb Meinert put Loyola ahead for the first time, 43-42. Sherwood Webster countered with a layup for American. But a long set shot by Vince Gallagher put Loyola ahead to stay, 45-44. Loyola has an 8-3 record. American has won four and lost four.

Lakers Beat Fort Wayne

Minneapolis, Jan. 4 (AP).—The Minneapolis Lakers scored their sixth straight triumph, beating Fort Wayne 91-75 in the National Basketball Association tonight.

The Lakers hit 34 out of 69 shots, their best record of the season. George Mikan's 22 counters set the pace. The winners held a 47-37 margin at the half but saw Fort Wayne close the gap to a three-point lead before they eased on to victory.

Henry Armstrong, Evangelist, Lauds Little Dynamite

Henry Armstrong, only boxer ever to hold three championships at the same time, stopped by Billy Edwards' gym yesterday and gave Featherweight Little Dynamite a quick look of approval.

Henry said that the youngster with the short arms has a weaving style reminiscent of his own. In fact, he liked it so much, Henry said he might come back to town Monday night to watch Little Dynamite in his 10-round bout with Charlie Titone at Turner's Arena.

Armstrong, 37, expects to become an ordained Baptist minister within a few months. He is now touring the country as an evangelist.

2 Oregon State Stars Killed In Sled Crash

Corvalis, Oreg., Jan. 4 (AP).—Two tobogganing Oregon State College athletes were fatally hurt when hit by a car on the campus last night.

Stan McGuire, Portland, football end named AP lineman of the week for his stellar play against Michigan State last fall, died today.

Bill Corvallis, 21, also Portland, a pitcher for the Santa Barbara, Calif., farm club of the Brooklyn Dodgers last season, died minutes after the toboggan in which they were riding swung from its tow car into the path of another automobile.

McGuire was to have captained Oregon State's football team next fall.

City Police Officer P. W. Harris said McGuire, Corvallis and two other students were riding on a toboggan being towed by a car driven by Bill Austin, Woodburn, Ore., who played pro football for the New York Giants last year. Austin is a graduate student at Oregon State.

Harris said the toboggan broke loose and swung into the path of a car coming from the opposite direction. It was driven by Vern Heckert, Corvallis businessman. The officer said the accident was unavoidable.

The other two students on the toboggan escaped injury. McGuire suffered a fractured skull.

Oklahoma Coach Says He Can't Meet Irish Before 1952

Norman, Okla., Jan. 4 (AP).—Coach Bud Wilkinson of the University of Oklahoma said tonight it will be impossible for Oklahoma and Notre Dame to arrange a football series until 1952.

Wilkinson arrived by train here from New Orleans where the Sooners beat L. S. U. in the Sugar Bowl game.

The Oklahoma coach said he has not talked with Notre Dame officials in several months but that he had written about 10 or 12 letters to schools in all sections of the country seeking dates for 1952 and 1953.

The Great Bend (Kans.) Tribune yesterday said Oklahoma athletic officials were trying to juggle schedules to bring about a meeting between the two schools at an early date.

Washington Bows Again Despite 20 By Nichols

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The Washington Caps' hopes of ever beating Rochester's Royals were dampened again last night when the local National Basketball Association outfit, favored by two points, was given a 72-63 going over at Uline Arena.

In spite of 20 points by Jack Nichols, the Caps dropped their fourth straight game this season to their New York cousins. Rochester, led by tow-headed Bob Davies of Seton Hall, was scoring its ninth triumph in a row.

The win solidified the Royals' hold on first place in the Central Division.

The Caps put up a good argument for one and a half periods—then sagged. They matched points before the Royals went on a 12-point spree that put the game on ice.

1641 See Game

A slim gathering of 1641 fans might just as well have left at that point.

Except for Nichols, the Caps were pitiful from the floor. They chalked up only 20 field goals in 77 shots while the Royals scored on 22 of their 62 tosses. Five of these, with as many single pointers, gave Davies scoring honors for the winners with 15 points.

The whole thing started off as the closest kind of a battle. No more than three points divided the clubs in the first period, the count being knotted on six occasions.

O'Keefe Ties It

On a single foray, Dick O'Keefe wiped out a 19-16 disadvantage for the home team, 30 seconds after the second period started.

Back and forth wobbled the lead for three minutes and then Washington gave out. Rochester rolled in 12 straight points while the Caps were missing from every angle. It was 33-23 before Nichols broke the spell with a foul toss.

For 9 minutes and 45 seconds of the third quarter, Rochester couldn't sink a field goal. But it retained five points of its lead on charity throws despite flashes of scoring brilliance from first Nichols, then Scolari and finally Feerick.

Calhoun's first field goal of the period put the Royals in front, 47-40, and Wanzer and Davies added double pointers for a 51-41 Rochester edge as the final session started.

The Caps whittled at that a little, but very little, to start the final period. They sneaked up within 7 points a couple of times, but with 3½ minutes left the difference was again 10 points, 64-54.

McKinney's foul toss and a three-point play by Scolari suddenly put Washington within six points. Shortly afterward that was cut to five by Nichols but successful foul conversions put the Royals back up there and they coasted home.

In a preliminary, St. Teresa's tiny aces ran up a 32-22 triumph over St. Anthony's in a Catholic Youth Organization game.

Frank Baxter Dies, Joined Nats in 1912

Baxter

Frank Baxter, equipment manager of the Washington Baseball Club and familiar figure at Griffith Stadium since 1912, died early yesterday of a heart attack at the home of his mother, Mrs. Mary Baxter, 1222 Penn st. ne. Death came while he slept.

Second-longest employe of the Washington club, Baxter, 49, was promoted successively by President Clark Griffith from bat boy to assistant trainer to equipment boss.

Known to every ball player in the American League during his 37 years with the Nats, Baxter was a favorite with them. Washington's three pennant-winning teams voted him in for generous shares of their World Series receipts.

Following the baseball season, he was engaged for the past several years by the Washington Redskins as their equipment man.

Wife, Son Survive

Trainer Mike Martin invited the teen-age Baxter to join the club as a bat boy in 1912, in the first year of Clark Griffith's management of the team. He was smitten by the boy's enterprise as self-appointed handy man around the park when it was the custom of the neighborhood kids to sweep up the place in the morning so that they might see the game free in the afternoon.

Mr. Baxter lived with his wife, Hazel Baxter, and their 14-year-old son, Ronnie, at 4908 Crescent st., Crestview, Md.

After graduating from high school, he gave up a bookkeeping position with a local automobile firm to accept a full-time post with the Nats in 1923 as clubhouse superintendent.

Nine years ago, Mr. Baxter suffered a heart attack while with the Redskins in New York, and was hospitalized there for several weeks. He was advised by doctors to stay away from the excitement of baseball and football, but announced his determination to "stay with the team."

Funeral Friday

Mr. Baxter saw President Taft throw out the first ball of the 1911 season, and witnessed all opening-day ceremonies from that year. He assisted Secret Service men in arrangements for the presidential visits to the stadium since 1912.

In addition to his wife and son, Mr. Baxter is survived by three brothers, John, Thomas and Fred, and by a sister, Doris, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m., at the Hines funeral parlors with the place of interment as yet unannounced.

Dallas Seeks Charlie Grimm

Dallas, Jan. 4 (AP).—The Times Herald said today Charlie Grimm, former Chicago Cubs skipper is being sought as manager of the Dallas Eagles of the Texas League.

Grimm is vice president of the Cubs of the National League.

The Times Herald quoted Dick Burnet, owner of the Eagles, as saying from Texarkana that he is talking with Grimm.

"I have nohting definite to announce," Burnett said.

"I had hoped the news that I was after Grimm would not leak out until some definite agreement had been reached.

In Chicago, P. K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs, said he had not heard of the reported offer

Grimm, serving as vice president of the Cubs, is under a $25,000 annual contract that does not expire until 1951.

Basketball Coaches Approve New York's 2-Minute Rule

New York, Jan. 4 (AP).—A new version of the two-minute rule in college basketball was tried at Madison Square Garden for the first time last night, and it was greeted with unanimous approval.

Even Coach Frank McGuire of St. John's, which lost its first game of the season, 54-52, to City College, was satisfied with the change.

Naturally, Coach Nat Holman of the winning Beavers was delighted.

"It speeds up the game," both agreed.

"The new rule made it a ball game right down to the last second. You didn't notice any of the fans walking out, did you?" Holman added.

The crowd of more than 18,000 apparently agreed with the mentors. The spectators cheered themselves hoarse in the final two minutes although only one point, and that in the final second, was scored.

Under the national rule, a team fouled in the last two minutes gets a free throw then takes the ball out of bounds.

The local version worked this way: Following all free throws in the final two minutes, opponents named by team captains jumped at the foul line.

American U. Raises $50,000 For Stadium

American University has raised more than $50,000 in its campaign for $225,000 with which to build a war memorial athletic center here.

Rear Admiral Paul L. Mather (retired), campaign chairman, said at a luncheon at the Touchdown Club yesterday that the drive will continue "until our objective is reached."

University officials have said that the contract for construction of the center will be let as soon as $100,000 is available in cash or pledges.

Bernie Moore Says SEC Will Stand Pat

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 4 (AP).—Southeastern Conference basketball team will keep the present rules governing the final two minutes of games.

SEC Commissioner Bernie Moore announced this decision today after discussions with conference basketball coaches.

The controversial two-minute rule gives the team against which a foul has been committed possession of the ball after foul shots in the last two minutes.

This has led to stalling tactics by teams a few points ahead late in the game.

Moore said the two-minute rule "is generally unstaisfactory," but added SEC "basketball coaches are not thoroughly agreed on the change that should be made."

On Turner's Mat

Lord Carlton Drops Dignity—and Baxter

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Lord Carlton, after assuming several positions that suggested he was about to become the late Lord Carlton, forgot parliamentary rules, went native and defeated Laverne Baxter at Turner's Arena last night.

I had written an obituary and was about to add "London papers please copy" when His Lordship arose, muttered something about "There will always be an England" and went to work on Lovely Laverne.

If Carlton did go to Oxford he must have majored in soccer for he really put his foot into it—Baxter's face, that is.

After what Baxter had done to him, Carlton probably had a kick coming. At any rate, the boot was good and probably the first point - before - touchdown ever recorded in United States sports history.

When Baxter returned to the ring he looked like a deflated ball. His Lorship pushed out what little air remained, flopped on him and it was all over—20 minutes flat.

As to be expected, Baxter had his innings. Before His Lordship knew the battle was under way, Laverne dove across the ring, gave him a Toni wave and a face-lifting job.

Just a friendly international greeting. However, Carlton didn't yell Uncle Sam although it's been done before if you know what I mean.

He retaliated a wrist-lock that he kept taut with a May-pole maneuver that only a "titled" Englishman would be allowed to get away with at Turner's.

When Baxter broke loose, he turned on a blitz. He gave Carlton the business and followed this with the works.

Once beserk, Laverne was beautiful to see. He handled and manhandled His Lordship and probably would have won there and then and script or no script except for Carlton's valet.

Baxter grabbed the attendant's cane and started swinging at everything and everybody within range. He didn't make a hit, however, which makes him eligible to go South with the Nats.

After this child's play and some that was dead on the level (some culprit in the crowd hit Baxter on the arm with a staple and he wanted to end the match at that point), Carlton took the offensive with moves new to the game hereabouts, including doing a leap frog jump over the referee and landing on Baxter.

Laverne then got in some effective licks but just as it appeared that London Bridge was falling down—well the end came.

Natie Brown, a hammered hero last week, became a victorious villain on the card. His victim was Chick Garibaldi. In other mtaches, a bunch of guys were messing around.

Grades Too Low

Central Five Loses Pantos Until Feb. 1

Jimmy Pantos, Central High's star basketball player, yesterday was declared ineligible for the rest of the semester, which expires January 28.

Central Principal Lawrence G. Hoover said yesterday that Pantos has passing grades in only two and one-half subjects, one-half less than the minimum required for eligibility.

Hoover said that Pantos' ineligibility is retroactive to December 2 when the current semester started. He added that Pantos can regain his eligibility February 1 for the second half of the season if he passes his grades.

Hoover's announcement means that Pantos was ineligible when he scored 15 points in Central's 63-44 victory over St. Albans before Christmas. Pantos scored seven as Central lost a 58-30 game to American U. Frosh. Hoover said that since the St. Albans game was not a league affair, Central will not forfeit unless asked to.

Hoover announced Pantos' status after a conference yesterday afternoon with Birch Bayh, head of health, physical education and safety in the public schools and Assistant Superintendent of Schools Norman J. Nelson.

The meeting was called when Coolidge and McKinley Tech High Schools informally questioned the eligibility of Pantos. They pointed out that Pantos started the current semester at Central, transferred to Longwood Prep of Olney, Md., and then returned to Central in violation of Rule 2b of the Interhigh code.

Pantos, slender 5-foot 10-inch forward, led Central to Interhigh basketball championships in 1948 and '49, and he halfbacked Central to the 1949 football title. He played second base on the baseball team, too.

Jim Young, Eynon Lead Green Tigers

Wilson's Green Tigers started slowly, gained scoring momentum as the game progressed and registered a 55-38 win over George Washington High of Alexandria yesterday at Wilson.

Jim Young, with 21 points for Wilson, was the game's high scorer. Everett Eynon also aided the winners' cause with 17 points, Erwin Jones' 13 points were high for the losers.

The Tigers, playing their first game of the season, had trouble solving the Presidents' sliding zone in the first period, but still managed to boast an 8-6 first quarter lead.

They increased their margin to 19-14 at the half and upped it to 41-32 at the three-quarter mark.

George Washington held the lead only once, 29-27, early in the third period.

It was the second loss in three games for George Washington. The Generals nosed out Montgomery Blair, 43-31, and Gonzaga eked out a 35-34 victory over them.

Teltier Scores 19 In Greenbelt Win Over Gaithersburg

Greenbelt scored its second win in three starts and handed Gaithersburg its fourth loss in six games, 45-33, yesterday at Gaithersburg.

Both teams could have fared better if they had been closer on their foul shot attempts. Greenbelt made only 7 of 18 attempts and Gaithersburg could connect only 7 of 24 tries.

Buddy Teltier scored 19 points to pace the winners. Dick Tetlow's 14 points were best for the losers.

Central Wins Minus Pantos

Central High played a basketball game without Jimmy Pantos for the first time in three seasons, and had little trouble trouncing Gonzaga, 48-27, yesterday at Central.

Pantos, who led Central to the Interhigh title in 1948 and '49, was declared scholastically ineligible yesterday.

However, Tery Gregory took up the scoring for Central in the first half, pouring in 10 points as the Vikings assumed a 20-13 lead. Franny Gleason and Jack Stringer followed through for Central in the second half scoring 18. It was Central's second win in three starts. Gonzaga has dropped three out of five.

Quantico Wins Eleventh Straight

Quantico, Va., Jan. 4.—The Quantico Marines made the Little Creek (Va.) Navy Amphibians their eleventh straight service basketball victims, 55-39, here tonight.

After gaining a 13-13 tie early in the second quarter, the Amphibians were outclassed. Chuck Skinner broke the tie for Quantico with a layup and he followed up with two more field goals and a foul shot before Ace Palco could counter for the Amphibs.

The Marines, unbeaten in service competition, were led by Cy Waldrop and Skinner, who had 16 and 11 points. Palco notched 14 for Little Creek.

Charles Without Contender for Heavy Crown

By Arthur Edson
Associated Press Sports Writer

Ezzard Charles, the world's heavyweight boxing champion as recognized by the National Boxing Association, finds himself in the position so long held by Joe Louis—no logical contender for his title.

The N.B.A. issued its quarterly ratings today without naming a single fighter it deems worthy to challenge Charles.

The N.B.A.'s president, Fred J. Saddy of Milwaukee, explained that Lee Savold and Bruce Woodcock, who formerly were rated logical contenders, had been too inactive to deserve that rating now.

Down to Oma

They've been demoted to the heading "outstanding boxers," along with Jersey Joe Walcott and Lee Oma.

"Charles wants to be a fighting champion but there is no worthy challenger available," Saddy said. "In fact, few if any heavyweights seem to be in the mood to meet Charles."

Indicating the lack of action in most divisions, Saddy had no other comment on the ratings except to note that "one of the year's outstanding boxers of 1949 was Kay Famecheon, the French featherweight, who was forced to the top among featherweight contenders."

"Famecheon warrants a rating along with Sandy Saddler, New York's leading challenger for Willie Pep's crown," he said.

Middleweight: Champion—Jake LaMotta, New York; logical contenders—Dave Sands, Australia; Tiberto Mitri, Italy; Robert Villemain, France; outstanding boxers—Rocky Graziano, New York; Steve Belloise, New York; Carl Olson, Hawaii; Laurent Dauthuille, France; Lee Sala, Pennsylvania; Randolph Turpin, England.

Lightweight: Champion—Ike Williams, Pennsylvania; logical contenders—Freddie Dawson, Illinois; Max Docusen, Louisiana; outstanding boxers—Arthur King, Canada; Enrique Bolanos, California.

Featherweight: Champion—Willie Pep, Connecticut; logical contenders—Sandy Saddler, New York; Ray Famecheon, France; outstanding boxers—Ronnie Clayton, England; Henry Davis, Hawaii.

Bantamweight: Champion—Manuel Ortiz, California; logical contenders—Luis Romero Spain; Danny O'Sullivan, England; Tirso del Rosario, Manila; outstanding boxers—Elly Bennett, Australia; Teddy Garner, England; Luis Galvani, Cuba.

Flyweight: Champion—Rinty Monoghan, England. Logical contenders—Honore Pratesi, France; Terry Allen, England. Outstanding boxers—Maurice Sanderyon, France; Norman Tennant, England; Jan Sneyers, Belgium; Norman Lewis, England.

Heinie's Forecast Missing as Video Cuts Into Crowds

By the United Press

Heinie Miller, executive secretary of the National Boxing Association yesterday placed the blame for the alarming decline in attendance in the spot squarely upon television.

He said television was wrecking gate recipts at bouts over large areas throughout the Nation.

"In past years it has been customary for the association to issue a forecast on boxing's prospects for the new year," he said. "That is well nigh impossible this year because a great proportion of today's boxing fans take their ring fare via television."

According to Miller, "attendance has hit a new low in all areas where boxing is televised."

Video Decides

"The curve downward depends upon the number of television sets in use," he added.

However, Miller emphasized there was no lag in interest in cities where televising of bouts either is not permitted or has not been developed.

"In such boxing centers as San Francisco, Spokane, Wash., Montreal, Quebec, and other cities where there is no television, boxing's gate receipts have hit an all-time high," he said.

Miller sounded his blast at television in connection with the new quarterly ratings of boxers in all divisions issued by the association.

AAU Bouts Shown On Color TV Tonight

Tonight the third preliminary round of the AAU boxing championships will be televised from Turner's Arena between 9:45 and 11:30 p. m., with Arch McDonald at the microphone.

But don't head for the nearest friendly tavern for there is a gimmick. The show can be seen only on the 15 color TV receivers imported by Columbia Broadcasting System especially for this experimental show which will be carried by Station WOIC.

Blair's Rally Tops W-L, 40-31

After trailing throughout the first three quarters, Montgomery Blair got hot in the last 5 minutes and ran off with a 40-31 victory over Washington-Lee High of Arlington yesterday at Blair.

With 5 minutes left, W-L held a 30-26 lead. Field goals by Red Scheif and John Selby tied it, and a foul goal by Morgan Wooten put Blair ahead.

Scheif followed up with another field goal, Selby tossed in two hook shots and Ray Luckett a layup and foul shot to ice Blair's fourth win in six games. W-L has a 2-2 record.

Ken Clark's Goal Wins for Laurel

Kenny Clark sank a set shot from outside the foul circle with less than 30 seconds to play to give Laurel a 40-38 win over DeMatha last night at Laurel.

Clark was also the game's high scorer with 13 points. Jerry DeVaney and Buddy Hartnett scored 10 points apiece for the losers.

The win was the first in two games for Laurel. DeMatha has won one and lost one.

McKee, Safford Win In Recreation Bill

McKee Pontiac won its fifth straight and Safford Chandler captured its third straight in a pair of District Recreation League basketball games at Roosevelt High gym.

McKee beat Scogna Tailors, 53-31, as Eddie Crescenze, former University of Maryland star, scored 11 points. Safford Chandler trimmed Catholic Men's Club, 40-30, as Jack Castro tallied 11.

Touchdowners Get Big Names To Give Prizes

Government bigwigs, seated at the head table will be called on to present the Touchdown Club's top football awards at Saturday night's big banquet at the Hotel Statler.

Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, chief of staff of the Air Force, will present Emil Sitko, Notre Dame, with the Walter Camp Trophy as outstanding college football back in the Nation. Gen. Clifton B. Cates, Marine Corps commandant, will award the Knute Rockne Trophy to End Leon Hart, Notre Dame, as outstanding college linesman.

Jim Thorpe, the old Carlisle Indian, will receive a scroll as America's greatest athlete of all-time from John Steelman, assistant to President Truman. Rep. Samuel Rayburn (D., Tex.) will salute Kyle Rote's performance for Southern Methodist against Notre Dame with a trophy.

Associate Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark will award Tackle Ray Krouse of Maryland with a trophy, honoring him as the top Washington area college athlete. Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, will honor Leo Speros of Woodrow Wilson and Mike Nolan of Gonzaga as high school football players of the year, and Bob Armentrout of the Langdon Lions as top sandlot player of the area.

Belk Scores 26, Parker-Gray High Beats Fort Belvoir

Six-foot 3-inch Lonnie Belk poured in 26 points as Parker-Gray High of Alexandria defeated Fort Belvoir (Va.) Post 512 last night on the Alexandria Recreation Department court.

It was Parker-Gray's third win in four starts. Henry Walker scored 15 for Belvoir.

Dear Folks:

The thousands of race fans who know him by sight and the hundreds who are his friends will be saddened to learn that Jake (Jockey Noboy) Jacobs is critically ill in Emergency Hospital. Jake, whose life's work has been doing favors for his friends (mostly "for free" as he says), was stricken last Tuesday. A familiar sight, with his papers and pictures under his arm, at race tracks from New York to Florida, Jake numbers among his intimates high Government officials, stage stars, top jockeys, newspaper and radio men and a host of others. Here's hoping Jake will beat the rap and be back at the tracks, come spring—his old grumbling but big-hearted self.—BILL.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Reorganization Plan For 'Strong' Chairmen Of Agencies Due Soon

The Government's many commissions and boards would be reorganized and placed under "strong" chairmen under a plan being drafted by the Administration.

The President can be expected to recommend the plan to Congress before many weeks.

The chairman of each of the regulatory agencies would be appointed by the President. The chairmanship wouldn't rotate among members as is now the practice at Federal Trade and Interstate Commerce, nor would the members themselves elect a chairman, as is done at Securities and Exchange, and Federal Power.

Most important, the chairmen would be made responsible for the administrative operations of their agencies. Budget, personnel, and other daily operating problems would be directly under the chairmen. The other commission and board members would attend hearings, write opinions, etc.

At the President's suggestion, the Civil Service Commission was reorganized along this line several months ago. The plan is working so well there that its extension to other agencies is now in the works.

G-GIRLS: Civil Service's Fair Employment Board is a good bet to amend its rules to allow it to look into cases of Federal job discrimination against women.

Under its present authority, the board is limited to cases where race and religious discrimination is involved. From its beginning, however, the board has been urged to look into cases by women who charge they aren't hired or not promoted because of their sex.

The President's Council of Economic Advisers was one agency to suggest that the board look into the charges. The matter has been brought to the attention of James L. Houghteling, new board chairman. Houghteling is reported to be sympathetic and he will take up the problem with his board.

EXPANSION? Several new Federal agencies would be set up if Congress carries out the President's legislative program as laid down yesterday in his State of the Union message. Among them would be:

A national science foundation, Columbia Valley Authority, St. Lawrence waterway agency, and a fair employment board.

The 4500 employes of the Office of Housing Expediter were relieved when the President urged Congress to extend rent control for another year. The agency must get more money soon from Congress or else lay off at least another 1000 employes. Rents control will expire June 30 unless extended.

In his message, the President made no mention of legislation to benefit Federal workers. He did ask for an extension of unemployment compensation; in the past, he has asked that Federal employes be brought in under it.

If the President has any plans for Federal workers he will reveal them Monday in his budget message.

Meantime, there are hints that the President's budget will provide for fewer full-time Federal jobs. The President is likely to recommend larger staffs for the Internal Revenue Bureau, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Atomic Energy Commission, Labor's Wage and Hour Division, Agriculture's Production and Marketing Administration, and the housing agencies, among others.

The big personnel cutbacks to be recommended by the President would be in Army, Navy, and Air Force. Veterans Administration also may get a reduced budget. Most of the reductions in the military agencies already have been made.

CAPITOL HILL: Bills to provide greater job security for severely disabled veterans were introduced in the House yesterday by Representatives Celler (D., N. Y.) and Heller (D., N. Y.). A similar bill, sponsored by Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.), was approved last year by the Senate. It would give absolute job preference to veterans with major injuries.

The Civil Service Commission has urged Congress to give greater job security to all persons with major injuries, veterans and non-veterans alike.

Ex-Soldier First Traffic Fatality in D. C. for '50

Bernard Gill Hit Attempting to Cross Park Pl. Near Grounds of Home

D. C. Traffic Deaths, 1950.....1
Deaths This Date Last Year.....1
Total Traffic Deaths, 1949.....71

A resident of Soldiers Home last night became the first traffic fatality of the new year.

He was Bernard Gill, about 50. Gill was struck by an automobile at about 6:15 p. m. while attempting to cross Park pl. nw. at Rock Creek Church rd. This is at the northwest end of the Soldiers Home grounds.

Gill was rushed to Casualty Hospital, where he was pronounced dead at 6:50 p. m.

Police said the car was driven by William I. Thompson, sr., 60, of 506 Nicholson st. nw., a stock clerk with the International Business Machines Corp.

Thompson told police he was driving south on Park pl. and did not see the man before he was hit.

Samuel Richardson, 2½, was critically injured at 8:15 p. m. when he was struck by a cab at New Hampshire ave. and Swann st. nw.

Police said the child and his mother, Mrs. Janie Richardson of 1710 Swann st. nw., had walked from between parked cars and started to cross New Hampshire ave. when suddenly the boy broke loose from his mother's grasp and ran directly in front of the cab.

Police said the cab was operated by Arthur I. Orme, 48 of 2707 Colston dr., Chevy Chase, Md.

The child was taken to Children's Hospital where it was said he suffered head injuries and possible internal injuries.

$14,400,000 More Parking Space Asked

Investment of $14,400,000 in facilities would cure Washington's downtown parking headaches, a District official declared last night.

Speaking to the Federation of Businessmen's Associations, Charles T. McGavin, planning engineer of the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, said 8000 additional car spaces costing about $1800 each are needed in the downtown area.

He stated the agency is trying to interest private capital to "make sound investments in parking." So far about 45 potential spots have been surveyed as to practicality of establishing parking lots or garages.

Such studies, made on request of investors, indicate present competition, probable future competitors and the number of potential parkers attracted by nearby enterprises. In some cases, parking generators such as stores and offices have contracted for parts of the proposed facilities, insuring profitable operation, McGavin said.

"The trick lies in synchronizing capacity to demand," McGavin said. Overcapacity is waste capacity, and fails to amortize initial cost, he explained.

Before McGavin's talk the federation voted to recommend removal of snow parking ban signs at a public hearing in the District Building Friday. Jack Blank was appointed to speak for the group.

Buy Gasoline In Maryland Drive Urged

The Silver Spring Board of Trade last night was urged by its executive secretary, Charles Kopeland, to begin a campaign to have Silver Spring residents buy gasoline in Maryland rather than the District of Columbia.

Christensen

Kopeland told the trade group that $100,000 in gas taxes, which could have been used to repair Maryland roads, was lost last year in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties.

The group, meeting in the Indian Spring Country Club, unanimously reelected Einar Christensen president. Board of Trade by-laws were changed recently to permit its president to succeed himself.

Other new officers chosen are Morris F. Taylor, first vice president; C. Robert Gray, second vice president; G. Edward DeNike, reelected secretary; Armor W. Friend, treasurer; Joseph O'Connell, assistant treasurer; Frank G. Beatty, sergeant at arms, and Sam Eig, Charles N. Graham, Judge William B. Wheeler, Frank L. Hewitt and John Fagan, members of the board of directors.

Other recommendations made by Kopeland for consideration by Board of Trade directors called for:

1. A radio campaign, similar to the ones staged in 1946 and 1947, boosting Silver Spring. 2. Publication of a pamphlet describing the community. 3. Expansion of off-street parking facilities, hailed at the meeting as a major cause for the community's development. 4. Establishment of a committee to set up a code of business ethics for Silver Spring.

Kopeland's recommendations also called for action by a committee to back the gas purchase drive.

Alexandria Club To Hear Charter Talk

Members of the newly-organized Exchange Club of Alexandria will hear a discussion of the city's proposed charter at 6:15 p. m. today at the Beachcombers Restaurant, located on the Potomac River at the foot of Prince st., Alexandria.

The speaker will be W. Bruce Silcox, a member of the Alexandria charter revision commission and a Department of Commerce economist.

District Has Hottest Jan. 4 As Mercury Hits 71 Here

plained, was being borne here on breezes from the south Atlantic and the east Gulf of Mexico. The wind, warmth and all, was strong enough to blow off an unusual number of hats downtown.

The 24-hour period was warm all the way through, beginning with an even 60 degrees at midnight Tuesday.

But today, the weather man predicted, this interval of spring in midwinter will start coming to a windup.

"Rain and turning colder by afternoon," the forecaster said. From a high of 60 during the day, the mercury is due to dive down to 35 during the night.

The cold wave which hit the midcontinent came on the heels of drenching rains that chased rivers out of their banks and raised a threat of serious floods.

In Indianapolis the weather bureau predicted major floods over the full length of the Wabash and White Rivers.

Both California and the Southwest also were hard hit by the weather.

In California, the battle of the smudge pots" was on, as orchardists fought through the night to protect the State's multi-million-dollar citrus crop. The pots sent up dense clouds of smoke which clouded the streets of Los Angeles and even halted traffic at San Bernardino airport. Freezing weather was general throughout the State.

Up through the Rocky Mountains and across the northern plains winter leveled its severest blows to date this season.

In Colorado's high mountain passes the mercury ranged to 21 below zero.

Blizzards howled across the Dakota prairies and into Minnesota. Highways were blocked, airliners grounded, rail and bus passengers stranded. In sections of Minnesota snow plows were forced to quit work, and 35-mile winds whipping newly fallen snow across the roads cut visibility to virtually nil.

Down the Nation's backbone the cold spread into Kansas, Texas, the Oklahoma Panhandle.

To all this the East presented a picture of contrast. In Washington tulip shoots were reported coming through, and in Maplewood, N. J., a woman broke off a branch of forsythia blossoms and mailed them to a friend who had gone to California to "get away from these bitter New Jersey winters."

On Maine's rocky and usually ice-bound coast at this time of year, the temperature in Portland was 63. Way up in Quebec, Canada, a man found parsley growing in his garden. At Martha's Vineyard off the coast of Massachusetts' rigorous Cape Cod, bluebirds were sighted.

Wonder Why It's Hot? We Asked Forecaster

Why is it so hot in midwinter Washington?

Because it's cold in California.

No, the 71-degree heat hasn't gone to anybody's head. That's the way it is, says the weatherman.

It's the nearest explanation anyhow, though Forecaster W. P. Day admitted: "It's so complicated I find it pretty difficult to explain even to myself."

It would take a textbook to tell it, said Day, but here it is in a little less:

"When cold air comes in over the Western States, particularly the Pacific States, circulation is shifted so that you have a northwest current aloft over the West, and southwest (warm) current over the Eastern States. This is just the reverse of usual.

"To repeat: The cold air over the Western States operates to set up a southerly circulation over the East—these south winds bring in the warm weather."

Foster Loses Court Fight for Reinstatement

Deputy Marshal Donald H. Foster, on annual leave with pay since contradicting key Government testimony in the "Snags" Lewis gambling trial in November, yesterday lost his fight for reinstatement to active duty and punitive damages of $75,000.

Foster

Foster sued U. S. Marshal Bruce Matthews, U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay, and Supervisor of U. S. Marshals Salvatore Andretta for $25,000 each and asked for a mandamus restoring him to active duty.

A marshal for 15 years, he was told to take active leave after he appeared as the only defense witness in the trial of Lewis and 13 others charged with operating a 14-million-a-year gambling syndicate.

Foster flatly contradicted testimony given by Assistant U. S. Attorney John W. Fihelly.

Differed on 2 Points

Fihelly testified that one of the defendants, Dean Kennedy, 2100 Queens Chapel rd., Avondale, Md., had appeared before him—without handcuffs, but with Foster—on March 25 immediately after his arrest. Fihelly, reading from notes taken at the time, said that Kennedy told him he was active in the bookmaking and numbers business.

Foster testified he had been handcuffed to Kennedy during the interview with Fihelly. Foster also said Kennedy had told Fihelly "I don't fool around with numbers."

Judge Burnita Shelton Matthews yesterday granted a Government motion to dismiss both the suit and the motion for a court order returning Foster to active duty.

Effect of Action

The effect of the court action is to keep Foster on annual leave until the Justice Department investigation of his case is terminated. Andretta said yesterday Foster's status remains unchanged, his case still under consideration. He said the Justice Department would not reach a decision until next week.

In a temporary District Court room in the Tax Court of the Bureau of Internal Revenue at 13th st. and Constitution ave. nw., Judge Matthews told defense attorney T. Emmett MacKenzie that he had "failed to state a claim on which relief could be granted."

Justice Department attorney Hubert H. Margolies represented the defendants Fay, Andretta and Matthews.

CTC Forecasts Extra-Fare Bus Express Routes

Highland Citizens Told by Giddings About Experimental Capitol Bridge Line

The proposed Washington Highlands extra-fare bus express may be the beginning of a series of District nonstop lines, a Capital Transit official said last night.

E. Cleveland Giddings, vice president of the traction company, said extra-fare express service superimposed on regular routes may result from this first proposed experiment to be conducted totally within the District.

Whether Capital Transit will be permitted to run the express service over a shorter route employing the South Capitol Street Bridge opening January 14 is something to be decided by the Public Utilities Commission later this month.

Giddings, addressing a meeting of the Washington Highlands Citizens Association last night at the Walter B. Patterson School, South Capitol and Darrington sts. sw., touched off a spirited 75-minute question period on the proposed service.

As a result, the group went on record favoring express and/or local bus service over the bridge, but at no extra fare.

Giddings for 15 minutes explained the proposed express service. He said a bus, running express from Portland and S. Capital sts. to Independence ave. and 2d st. sw., would be operated during rush hours over the bridge and along Livingston rd.

This, he said, would be a shorter (by 1.1 miles) route which would take around 20 minutes off the running time. The three other routes would continue over the present 11th st. lines (Fort Drum, Bellevue and Livingston).

He said the service would cost 5 cents more because of its premium nature.

This was the point which aroused the majority of questions. Why, Giddings was asked, should it cost more to operate a bus along a shorter line?

He said the service represented "extra service," therefore it would cost more. Giddings added that even if the transit company gets it proposed over-all fare increase, this nonstop service would still cost extra.

To several questions, he replied, "if you don't want to ride this line (the newly proposed one), you don't have to."

Transit Fare Increase Is Asked in Baltimore

The Baltimore Transit Co., whose streetcar and bus fares just about parallel those of the Capital Transit Co., yesterday gave its employes a 10-cent-an-hour wage boost and immediately asked for higher fares.

The company seeks permission from the Maryland Public Service Commission to raise its regular fare to 15 cents (present fare is 13 cents in both Washington and Baltimore). It now sells two tokens for a quarter, compared to the 3-for-35-cent rate here.

School children would have to pay 7 cents. They now pay 5 cents in Baltimore, 3 cents in Washington.

E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co. here, said last night he was "not prepared to say" whether the changes in the fare system which the BTC wants forecast those CTC will request from the District PUC.

Merrill said we "haven't made up our minds" what fare hike to ask of PUC, nor when to submit the request.

Capital Transit Hearing Set for Suburb Fares

Baltimore, Jan. 4 (AP).—Maryland's Public Service Commission today set a hearing for 10 a. m. January 24 on an application by Capital Transit Co. to increase its fares in the Maryland suburbs of Washington.

Capital Transit last week filed a petition asking that the zone fare it uses in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties be increased to 7 cents. The present rate is 5 cents.

Divorce Denied

'No Fool Like An Old Fool,' Says Judge

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

With the observation that "there is no fool like an old fool," Judge Jennings Bailey, 82, refused yesterday to give Samuel A. Stebbins, 75, a divorce from his 49-year-old wife, Irene.

Judge Bailey

The venerable District Court jurist said Stebbins had failed to prove a case of cruelty. The judge acknowledged that Stebbins' four-year marriage is a hectic one but said it was of his own making.

Stebbins, a retired motorman who resides at 5426 MacArthur blvd. nw., charged that his wife roamed his house in the nude, refused to cook his meals, made indecent gestures at him, locked her bedroom door and threw a cup of cold water on his white hair.

Mrs. Stebbins denied all this and countered that Stebbins drank to excess, chased her in his underwear with a .22-caliber rifle and wanted to get rid of her. She said that she wanted to be a dutiful wife and keep "unscrupulous" persons from taking advantage of her husband.

Under Judge Bailey's ruling, she can remain in Stebbins home, where they sleep in separate bedrooms and were arguing even this week, according to testimony.

In deciding the case, Judge Bailey said:

"There is nothing truer than that saying that there is no fool like an old fool. You can turn that back on me, but that is the way I feel when it comes to any situation such as the plaintiff (Stebbins) had in this case."

The judge then started to laugh.

Two former roomers had taken the witness stand to bolster Stebbins' charge that his wife sometimes wore no clothes in her home.

Roy G. Roberts, one of them, said Mrs. Stebbins later told him, "I probably looked better in my younger days."

Mrs. Stebbins denied Roberts' charges and also denied she stayed with Mr. Stebbins only to inherit his $17,500 home.

She said Stebbins wanted her to pay room rent and refused to sleep in the same room with her lest his "nocturnal habits" such as smoking and reading in the middle of the night disturb her.

Under examination, she said sorrowfully when asked whether she had lived up to her wedding vow to obey her husband:

"I was not required to obey him but I tried as hard as I could to love and honor him. But he has made it impossible."

Earlier, Stebbins had testified that "age is honorable."

When an attorney argued that Stebbins, despite his age, had a right to expect a happy marriage, Judge Bailey replied:

"A man of 75 getting married can't expect to get a woman much younger than she is."

When told that Stebbins was nervous and upset over his present home life, Judge Bailey declared:

"I am not surprised what with the life they lead that it would have this effect on him, but I think he did as much as she did to provoke the troubles they have all the time."

It is Stebbins' third marriage and the second for his spouse.

Gerth Installed Head Of Columbia Club

Theodore P. Gerth, Washington attorney, was installed as president of the Columbia Club last night at its third annual dinner at Hotel 2400. Other officers installed were Raymond W. Fischer, vice president; Jerry Hysong, secretary, and Thomas Knox, treasurer.

The organization is composed of young businessmen. Many are sons of Cosmopolitan Club members. Only one representative of each profession or business may join the club.

Ex-Marine, 22, Takes Life In Second Suicide Attempt

A 22-year-old marine veteran ended his life in Silver Spring, Md., yesterday by placing the muzzle of a .410 gauge shotgun in his mouth and firing.

The youth, Dee Marcus Wynn, was found lying in a pool of blood at 4:30 p. m. in the basement of a home at 813 Heron dr. by his brother-in-law, Charles W. Smith, with whom he lived.

Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, issued a certificate of suicide and ordered the body removed to the Pumphrey funeral home, Silver Spring.

Police said Wynn, who had four years' service in the Marines, some of it overseas, left a note directing how to dispose of his automobile and other property. The note gave no reason for his suicide.

According to police, Wynn had been treated for a mental condition recently at Mount Alto Hospital, and about six weeks ago was taken to that hospital again, after slashing his wrists in a suicide attempt.

The victim's brother, Robert J. Wynn, a marine stationed at Norfolk Naval Air Station who was in Silver Spring on furlough, told police he talked with his brother at the home at 3:30 p. m., only 30 minutes before the time fixed for the shooting by Dr. Broschart.

Robert Wynn said his brother appeared to have been drinking, but did not seem despondent. However, he told police he knew his brother had recently had differences with his girl friend.

Names for South Capitol Bridge Cover U. S. History

The District Commissioners are receiving plenty of free advice on a name for the new South Capitol st. bridge to be dedicated January 12 at 2 p. m. One woman has even offered a bottle of water from the Suwanee River for the christening if it is named for Stephen Foster.

Suggestions range from George Washington to Franklin Roosevelt.

The name of James V. Forrestal, first Defense Secretary, was suggested because "military installations of all the services are in close proximity," and because Forrestal "became the bridge over which America passed to unite our military services. . . ."

An Arlington woman, whose offerings were apparently intended to include also the new Highway Bridge, suggested: Washington, Jefferson, Jefferson Memorial, Roosevelt, Eisenhower, Orville Wright, Capitol.

The woman nominating Songwriter Stephen Foster thought his name "very appropriate" because two other District bridges, Key and Sousa, are named for famous composers.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, late District director of highways, referred to it as the Victory Bridge—because it was the first to be started after the war. But it was never officially given that name.

Plans for opening-day ceremonies will be discussed at the District Building today between District officials and Southeast citizens groups. District officials said they doubted that a name would be selected by the opening date.

Willmott Lewis Dies; Noted Correspondent

Sir Willmott Harsant Lewis, 72, correspondent emeritus of The Times of London and one of the most famous newspapermen in America, died unexpectedly about 4 p. m. yesterday at his home, 3425 Prospect ave. nw.

The cause of the death of Sir Willmott—who had so many American friends that he was sometimes called "Britain's unofficial ambassador—was a heart attack, his physician said.

He had returned home from lunch at the National Press Club, of which he was an active member, and where he was for many years a familiar figure, and was sitting in his room reading a magazine when about 3:10 p. m. he apparently fell from the chair.

The sound aroused Lady Lewis, who was resting in an adjacent room, and a moment later she heard him call, "come and help me."

She found him on the floor and was able to talk to him for a few minutes before he died.

Sir Willmott, whose career as a foreign correspondent dated back to the days of the Boxer Rebellion in China and the Russo-Japanese War, was assigned to Washington by The London Times in 1920. He retired two years ago.

Sir Willmott was a learned man, and the story that he once addressed a meeting of Latin scholars in 17 different languages is only one of the many anecdotes told of this aspect of his character.

His knowledge of American history was particularly keen. His dispatches abounded in quotations from the founding fathers, Chief Justices of the United States, Peter Finley Dunne's "Mr. Dooley," and others. His thoughtful dispatches, written with remarkable insight into American character and understanding of the working operation of the American Government, did much to inform Britain.

At the time Lewis was assigned to Washington, London journalists regarded the United States as a place of exile. Sir Willmott made it one of the most enviable of assignments.

The special place he gained in Anglo-American affairs was recognized in 1931 when he was made knight commander of the Order of the British Empire. It is said that the only time he ever turned pale was when the word of his knighthood came.

Around the National Press Club he was still "Bill Lewis," however. When someone asked him how it felt to be a knight, the tall, spare figure with the impeccably British look boomed in his rich bass voice, "Well, I'll tell you, old boy, Willmott Lewis used to fetch $250 a lecture. Sir Willmott Lewis gets $500."

The story is indicative of other aspects of Sir Willmott's character—Lewis the talker—who was one of the town's most brilliant conversationalists and most sought after dinner guests—and lecturer, who only a few days ago went to Oklahoma to speak. And Lewis the human, quick with a joke, and an indefatigable poker player.

Sir Willmot was born in Cardiff, Wales, June 18, 1877, of a well-to-do family. In British schools he showed an aptitude for languages and topped his education off with a study at Heidelberg and the Sorbonne. Returning home, the best he could do in the way of newspaper work was a meager routine job on a Brighton newspaper.

He eventually extricated himself through his knowledge of shorthand. His mastery of the subject secured him a job with the North China Herald in Shanghai. In Shanghai, he lived spectacularly, largely on credit, and was a pride of local society with his string of ponies.

From Shanghai he moved to Nagasaki, Japan, to edit a small newspaper, and while there married Lina Jessie Ringer, who subsequently died, leaving two children who survive him.

In 1903 he persuaded James Gordon Bennett of the New York Herald into letting him cover the prospective troubles in the Far East.

He covered the Russo-Japanese war with such correspondents as Richard Harding Davis and Martin Egan, and scored a beat on Japan's costly naval victory at the battle of Liaoyang.

After the war he drifted to San Francisco, led a none-too-prosperous existence there and at one time opened a gymnasium with a friend known as Philadelphia Jack O'Brien. In 1911 he was back in the Orient, editing the Manila Times under Martin Egan.

During World War I he worked with the Paris committee of George Creel's Committee on Public Information and received the Legion of Honor. Following the war, he worked for the Paris Herald for a short time and was then offered the post of Washington correspondent by Lord Northcliffe, owner of The Times.

Sir Willmott, always the loyal Briton, recognized that no nation or race is likely to be perfect. His creed, in that respect, was: "He who believes that the statements of his country are always the most wise and the women most chaste, is likely to be wrong on one count and possibly on both."

In 1926 he married Ethel Noyes, daughter of the late Frank B. Noyes, president of the Washington Star and of the Associated Press. They had one son, Willmott, jr., of Washington, who survives him. Also surviving is a sister, Miss Elsie Lewis of Dorset, England.

The second marriage ended in divorce, and in early 1939 Lewis married Mrs. Norma Bowler Hull, the present Lady Lewis.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Friday at the Washington Cathedral.

The National Press Club will be represented by Oswald R. Schuette, George W. Stimpson, Charles O. Gridley, Bascom N. Timmons, Raymond P. Brandt, James L. Wright, Mark Foote, Jay G. Hayden, Bunius B. Wood, Russell McFarland, Charles Campbell, Ben Marsh, Judge Marvin Jones, Radford Mobley, Paul J. McGahan, Lorenzo Martin, George E. Durno and Ralph A. Collins.

Calvin Lauber
Former D. C. Fire Marshal Dies in N. Y.

Calvin G. Lauber, District Fire Marshal from 1930 to 1943, died unexpectedly yesterday in the street outside his New York office a few moments after his wife telephoned him of the death of his 86-year-old father.

Mr. Lauber

Since leaving the District, Mr. Lauber, who was 55 at his death, has been with the National Board of Fire Underwriters in New York. He was recently promoted to acting chief engineer.

A graduate of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, he served in the Army Signal Corps in World War I, later worked as a fire-alarm engineer with the Underwriters Laboratories, Inc., before joining the National Board organization.

He left that group to take the fire marshal's post in Washington, after passing a competitive examination.

He was a technical consultant in 1947 for President Truman's National Conference on Fire Prevention. He was a member of the executive committee of the National Fire Waste Council and member of technical committees of the National Fire Protective Association.

Mr. Lauber lived with his father, Henry Lauber, a retired farmer, and Mrs. Lauber, at Manhasset, Long Island. The father died there about noon. Mrs. Lauber reached her husband at his office about 1:30 p. m., and informed him of the father's death. Minutes later, Mr. Lauber died.

Besides his wife, Mr. Lauber is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Margaret Vandenberg of Rochester, N. Y., and Miss Henrietta Lauber, a student at Tufts College,

Dr. George Rice, 83, Dies; Pioneer in Mine Safety

Dr. George S. Rice, 83, who pioneered in the study of cause and prevention of coal mine explosions, died yesterday at the Washington Sanitarium Takoma Park, Md., after a long illness.

Veteran of nearly 30 years' service in the Bureau of Mines, Dr. Rice was its chief mining engineer and led experiments which ended in the discovery that some mine explosions are due to dust, rather than gas, as had been supposed.

Dr. Rice retired from active service on September 30, 1937, but later finished work on an exhaustive report on mining conditions both here and abroad.

He also was instrumental in developing a ventilation system for the Holland Tunnel under the Hudson River, N. Y.

As a Bureau of Mines official, Dr. Rice drafted plans for the world's first experimendtal mine, directed its accident prevention tests and the method of "rock dusting" which since has prevented many mine disasters.

He was an honorary member of the British Institution of Mining Engineers and had been honored by the governments of England, France and Canada for his preventive work in mine explosions.

A native of Claremont, N. H., he graduated in mining engineering from Columbia University and was associated with coal companies before he became a mining engineer with the Geological Survey in 1908, where he was in charge of field investigations.

Dr. Rice lived at Wellington Villa, Alexandria.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sarah Marie Rice; a daughter, Mrs. Katharine Mollison of Wellesley Hill, Mass.; a son, J. Brewster Rice of Short Hills, N. J.; a brother, Chester, of New York, and four grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 3 p. m. at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be private.

GEORGE RICE
Dies at 83

Dr. Richard J. Purcell

A high requiem mass will be sung for Dr. Richard J. Purcell, history professor at Catholic University for the past 29 years, at funeral services Saturday at 10:30 a. m. in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the Catholic University grounds.

Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Dr. Purcell, who lived at 1233 Lawrence st. ne., died at his home Tuesday of a heart attack.

Florence A. Burrus

Kansas City, Jan. 4 (AP).—The woman who taught President Truman to play the piano died yesterday.

She was Miss Florence A. Burrus, 82 years old. She was a next door neighbor of the Trumans.

Miles Tiernan

Indianapolis, Jan. 4 (AP).—Miles Tiernan, 52, promotion director of the Indianapolis Star and News, died today in a Batesville, Ind., hospital after being hurt in an automobile accident.

Tiernan's car turned over near Batesville Sunday after he was blinded by oncoming lights. A heart ailment aggravated by shock was blamed for his death.

Tiernan had been with the Star since 1919.

Mrs. Annie E. Baker

Middletown, Ohio, Jan. 4 (AP).—Mrs. Anne E. Baker, 95, a sister of former Gov. James M. Cox of Dayton, died today.

She was the widow of John Q. Baker, founder of the Middletown News Signal, which merged with the Middletown Journal years ago.

Ashby Tanner, Merchant in Arlington, Dies

Ashby T. Tanner, 73-year-old Arlington merchant, died Tuesday morning in Arlington County Hospital after an illness of two years.

Funeral services will be held Friday morning at 10 a. m. in St. James Catholic Church, Falls Church, Va. Burial will be at Oakwood Cemetery, Arlington.

Mr. Tanner was a native of Culpeper, Va. He came to Washington when he was 13 and studied in the District schools. Later he owned and operated a dairy farm in Oakley, Va.

He came to Arlington in 1930 and for 18 years conducted a mercantile business at 5801 Lee hwy. His residence adjoined his store.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Edward C. Corbin and Mrs. Bascom C. Slemp, of Arlington, two brothers, Joseph and Russell, and a sister, Mrs. Grover Berry, of Orange, Va., and two grandchildren.

Widowed When Son Was An Infant, Mother Asks How to Meet His Questions About His Father's Whereabouts; Lad Nears Four, Grows Curious

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young widow, 29 years old, and I was left with an infant son when my husband died nearly three years ago. Now my son is three and a half years old and he is beginning to ask where his daddy is.

While we lived with my parents he used to call my father "daddy-grampa." But recently I got my own apartment and the child is asking constantly where his daddy is. I don't want to hurt him, nor do I want to tell him a lie. Will you please straighten me out as to how to explain about his father?

Occasionally my younger brother baby-sits for me and spends the night, and Sonny has started to call him daddy. Naturally I don't want him to call my brother "daddy," and my brother insists that I try to explain, "This is your uncle,"—but Sonny is so young and I have a fear of giving him a wrong answer, as it might give him a complex. His father died of a service-connected disability. Please advise me. D. C.

Mother's Fears Create Problem

DEAR D. C.: The average child Sonny's age is constantly asking questions, period—provided his sense of aliveness is normally stimulated by comfortable communicative association wth amiably intelligent, articulate persons. And the more satisfactorily his curiosity is fed, from his viewpoint, the less likely is he to develop anxieties due to verifiable answers given.

Satisfaction of curiosity from a child's viewpoint is achieved when he "feels" reassurance in the emotional tone of the reply, or when he is helped to "see" the answer in terms of mental imagery, supposing literal statements are over his head. And bear in mind that the young child in the question-box stage seldom if ever has preconceived (much less fixed) ideas of how things ought to be: thus facts about a situation that conventional adults might find "shocking" will be casually accepted by him as "what is,"—provided he doesn't "feel" scandal or anxiety or other negative emotions in the teller's attitude.

It seems to me the problem to be overcome here is your peculiar sensitivity to questions bearing on your husband's death. You say he died of a service-connected disability, and your flinching evasion of the subject generally suggests that you may feel on the defensive, socially, about the nature of his last illness; and thus perhaps would prefer to inter his history with his bones, and keep your son's awareness of his father to a minimum, as if to shield him from that aspect of his heritage.

Brief Illustrative Answers Help Child

IF YOU can get your neurotic feelings out of the way, by recognizing what they are about, and realizing that Sonny's innocent outlook is free of them, then you will find it possible to answer his questions easily and factually, in words and tones that won't disturb him. And while it is ideal balance, in communicating with a child, always to supply information lightly and briefly—to keep him from feeling overwhelmed,—you may speak illustratively, if he presses for clarification of his father's whereabouts.

For pointers: 1. Pay close attention to determine whether Sonny's questions about his daddy refer to his father or grandfather. Since leaving your parents' home, naturally he misses his "daddy-grampa," and he may be asking for the latter in saying, "Where is my daddy?" 2. However, even if he is asking for his grandfather, take this opportunity to mildly distinguish between daddy and "grampa."

Putting across the distinction may take time, but to start you may say carefully, "Daddy-grampa is at his house, eating supper with granny." Then wait a full pause and add, "But our other daddy is dead." What to say next depends on Sonny's response. If he chatters on about daddy-grampa, fall in line. If he picks up the phrase "daddy is dead," and tries to fathom what is meant, then you may say illustratively, "Daddy is gone . . . up to heaven . . . daddy is with the angels . . ." etc. . . . which will help the child grasp, in traditional imagery, the finality of his father's departure from human scenes.

If Sonny senses the meaning of death and loudly grieves, thinking his daddy-grampa has vanished, then say mildly, "No, no; daddy-grampa is at his house. Let's call him on the telephone. Our other daddy is gone . . . a long, long time ago . . . when Sonny was a tiny baby." And there drop the subject temporarily if Sonny seems willing, and telephone to lift the lad's spirits and indirectly underscore the point you're making. As for your brother, always address him as Uncle Dan (let's say) in Sonny's presence, or speaking of him to Sonny—and the lad will soon catch on and call him uncle involuntarily. M. H.

Did It With Her Own Little Vote

By Genevieve Reynolds

FIFTY YEARS AGO grandma's political influence consisted of a few whispered suggestions to grandpa—unless she happened to be a speech-making suffragette. But today's American woman personally expresses her approval or disapproval of issues and candidates with her own vote and her own organizations. She's courted by both political parties.

Along the way, she's managed to pluck a few political plums for herself by winning congressional seats, a paucity of top diplomatic posts, some high Federal Government positions and a sprinkling of mayorships throughout the country.

There's even talk of running one lady lawmaker—Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.)—for Vice President, neat hope to round a half-century of female political progress.

The American woman's most dramatic achievement in the last half century was winning the franchise. Struggle for the ballot was long and bitter. Early women crusaders suffered abuse, ridicule, even went to jail. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, legislative chairman, D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs,

MRS. HARVEY WILEY
. . . went to jail for the vote

SENATOR SMITH
. . . may reap the reward

is one of the suffragettes who was plunked into the District jail for picketing the White House. Congress approved the woman's suffrage amendment to the Constitution on June 4, 1919.

SINCE she obtained the vote, woman's legal status has changed. Now women can participate actively in lawmaking; share in jury duty in all but 11 States; make business and legal contracts without the signature of husbands.

A wife today, with some exceptions, enjoys full property rights. Contrary to the situation 50 years ago, the wife can keep her own earnings. No longer is a wife subject to her husband's forcible restraint.

Still to be achieved is constitutional equality, which would wipe out some 1200 existing discriminatory civil laws against women. The National Woman's Party and approximately 30 national women's organizations advocate passage of an equal rights amendment to the Constitution as the way to achieve this equality.

ON THE club front, women's organizations have more than quadrupled in size and influence. Estimates of total membership in United States women's clubs vary between 30 and 40 million.

Both officially and nonofficially, United States women's clubs have become high-pressured lobbyists in the legislative field. Through adoption of resolutions and paid lobbyists on Capitol Hill they influence legislation. Also they have become great shapers of public opinion.

LEGALLY, most professions have been opened to women, as have virtually all universities. Greatest job opportunities came during World War II, in both private industry and Government. According to the Census Bureau, women are listed in most of the 500 types of employment. Equal pay for equal work is still a goal to be achieved in most businesses and professions. There still are great discrepancies in pay for men and women teachers, to cite an example.

Aside from her eternal struggle to keep young, the American woman's most preserving present problem is to obtain recognition in public affairs compatible with her merits. She's gone a long, hard way in the past 50 years, but she still sees a few milestones on the road ahead.

By Nicha Soure

THE LEAGUE of Women Voters of the District of Columbia will bid farewell to Mrs. John McClintock, outgoing president, and welcome Mrs. Donald Beatty, the new president, at a tea today.

The tea will be from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Irwin Geiger, 1633 Van Buren st. nw.

Mrs. Irving Gumbel is chairman of the event assisted by Mrs. Fred Bunting, Mrs. Robert F. Leonard, Mrs. Vance Johnson, Mrs. Kenneth Fry, Mrs. Alice Hunter, Mrs. Marcus Mensh and Mrs. John Auchincloss. Mrs. Maurice Goodman and Mrs. John Thomas will preside at the tea table.

Brandeis President Coming

ONE-YEAR-OLD Brandeis University undoubtedly will be the main topic of conversation at a reception Monday in the Terrace Room of the Shoreham Hotel.

On that day the officers and board of directors of the Washington chapter, National Women's Committee, Brandeis University, will honor the university's president, Dr. Abram Leon Sachar.

The University at Waltham, Mass., was started by a group of Americans interested in fostering a Jewish-sponsored, nonsectarian institute of learning. The women's committee is sponsoring the university library which now has 10,000 books with a goal of 40,000.

World Federalism Panel Slated

"WORLD FEDERALISM" will be the topic of a panel discussion at 8 p. m. Friday when the United Nations Club and the Columbia University Alumnae Club hold a joint discussion meeting at 1701 19th st. nw.

Robert Green, director of the School of Contemporary Arts, will be moderator of the panel which will include Philip Werner Amram, chairman, District of Columbia branch, United World Federalists, Inc.; Robert J. Bishop, executive director, Atlantic Union Committee; and Miss Margaret Banister, director of women's interests, Department of National Defense.

On Today's Calendar

Where to Send Old Xmas Cards

Attention to E. C. and others who would like a place to send their used Christmas cards. These following addresses have been sent in by our readers:

P. O. Box 4434
Brookland Station,
Washington 17, D. C.

The cards sent to this address are classified as to subject matter and are then made into scrapbooks or Christmas tree ornaments, and the items sent to homes for the aged, orphanages, hospitals, local and elsewhere.

The Children's Hospital,
13th and W sts, nw.,
Washington 9, D. C.
Mrs. Herbert Morgan,
2252 Hall Place, nw.,
Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Morgan is an invalid who uses the cards to make scrapbooks for little children in the mountains and thus helps to pass along hours for herself.

Mrs. Charles E. Wood,
3714 S. st. nw.,
Washington 7, D. C.

Mrs. Wood has use for good religious Christmas cards to send to missionaries in foreign fields for Sunday School material and to give to members and children of the foreign congregations to whom a picture means a great deal.

Packages of cards sent to these above addresses should be sent postage paid. I wish to thank L. D. H. of Alexandria and M. E. W., C. E. W., M. K. F., E. L. F. of Washington who have sent in these addresses.

Could you give me the names and addresses of smoking pipe collectors? I would appreciate them. G. S.

Are there any pipe collectors among us who would identify themselves for a Buffalo, N. Y., reader?

I washed a white woolen sweater which has colored stripes in the waist and sleeves. The colors ran considerably. Is there any way I can remove the stains. H. C. M.

Fugitive colors are about the most difficult of all stains to remove because anything which will remove the stains will also remove the other colors. In this instance, the best suggestion I can make is to dip the sweater in a color remover product which is safe to use on wool to take all the color out of the sweater and then dye it again.

Please tell me what to use to blacken a fireplace screen and to clean the smoke off the bricks on the front of the fireplace. J. N. H.

Go over the screen with black screen or stove enamel. If the screen is one which sets flush with the opening of the fireplace, the stove enamel which resists heat is perhaps a better choice.

Smoke can usually be removed from the bricks by scrubbing them with a stiff brush and water to which has been added washing powder. Or, a mechanic's hand soap containing a gritty substance is good for removal of soot. When clean, rinse thoroughly and dry. If you wish to enrich the brick colors, give them a soaking application of raw linseed oil. The oil will also help to keep the brickwork clean in the future.

Attention M. E. C.: Here is a bread recipe which uses no wheat flour:

Wheatless Bread
2 cups graham flour
1 cup rye or barley flour
1 cup rolled oats
1 cup milk
1 cup water
2 teaspoonsful of baking powder
2 teaspoonsful of salt
2 tablespoonsful of molasses or brown sugar
2 tablespoonsful of melted shortening
½ lb. raisins may be added if desired
Bake 1 hour in slow oven.
Makes 1 loaf.

Thank you, Mrs. L. E. H. of Washington for sending this recipe.

In a former article you once told approximately how much fuel was consumed by certain dates throughout the winter. I wish you would please re-publish this information C. L. D.

These following percentages were compiled by a large fuel oil firm and are based on Washington winter temperatures. Their percentages are: 26 percent of the yearly fuel should have been consumed by December 11; 50 percent by January 17; 75 percent by February 22; and 100 percent by the end of May.

PETUNIA!

I used a little strategy
To give it extra zing,
And my fragrant little pot roast
Is a mighty lovely thing!

Bet you used horseradish, Petunia! If you spread it over your pot roast, then simmer as usual and make gravy from the drippings, both gravy and meat have a fine new flavor.

Your Baby

Early Start Helps Child To Feed Self

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

ONE OF the most impressive pictures I ever saw was a motion picture of a tableful of 1-year-old babies spooning up their cereal in lively fashion. But this was taken in an institution where babies early learn to be independent.

Our own babies frequently get no opportunity to feed themselves until they are close to the 2-year mark. Mothers don't like the mess they make. They find it time-wasting to watch the child feed himself instead of getting the task over with quickly when they do it themselves.

It's true that self-feeding may be fascinating to the baby and he prolongs the fun of it. He will be messy and use his hands, drop food on the floor, bubble into his milk and make a big game of it all. But how else will be ever learn to be adept, quick and neat, except by this necessary practice?

Eager at Outset

When he is a 1-year-old he may be pulling the spoon from his mother's hand, eager to use it himself. By 2½ he may be leaning back in his high chair lazily opening his mouth while someone else stuffs food into it.

In the beginning of this training for self-feeding, the mother will do well to use two spoons, one for the baby to manipulate and the other for purposeful use. At first, the baby will get so little on his spoon that she must be there to satisfy his appetite with what she gives him. But, meanwhile, he will be imitating her actions and when he has been successful in getting a mite on his spoon, or even in bringing up a spoon load, this is the time to make a great fuss over his success and admire him for being such a big boy.

Practice Helps Out

With the practice the child will be more and more ready to take over the chore of feeding himself. His mother will need to be patient about his dawdling. She will have to put a paper or an oilcloth under his high chair and overlook the blobs of food upon it. She should not expect him to be tidy about eating and the less criticism he gets the more eager he will be to continue to try to become more adept.

And when he is really tired and stops eating because of it, then give him a helping hand. At first the task will be so enormous that he may be indifferent to his food. But, eventually, his practice will lead to an ease of accomplishment that will make it possible for him to feed himself. Speed that happy day, his mother is sure to say.

New Beach Fashions Are Whistle-Worthy

It's a Lucky Girl Who Needs a Bathing Suit

By Peggy Preston

IT'S a lucky girl who is shopping for bathing suits today. We envy her, dreadfully. For it means that while we must languish for months in our dreary clime, she is off to the lands of sun and surf.

But, let us bury our bitterness. Let us admit that there are hundreds of Washingtonians smart enough to arrange vacations in the winter, as well as in the summer. If they can go shopping for beach wear at this time of year, we might as well have the fun of looking over what they buy.

From here it appears that the one-piece suit is going to win out over the two-piece on the beaches in 1950. They'll be whistle-worthy enough, however —often strapless, with tops cut in tricky ways. In some instances they will resemble the tops of the season's best evening dresses, the edges embroidered or sprinkled with rhinestones.

In the fabric line nylon is a star, because of durability and quick-drying powers. However, rayons and cottons, shirred or elasticized make up into some of the prettiest of the swim suits. The Irish linen used in the outfit pictured here is crisp and crease resistant, and is something quite novel in beach wear.

Don't neglect to look at the wool jerseys, either. For sheer comfort the woolen bathing suit is tops. The old-fashioned natural fibers have something that no man-made fabric can duplicate.

In other divisions of play clothes this year, there is a boyish air. Waistcoat and trousers in a linen-like rayon have the look of an Eton school boy about them. A Planter's jacket, worn with shorts would be dandy (in a smaller size, of course) on Little Boy Blue.

NYLON, which has nosed its practical way into everything from velvet swim suits to beach shoes, has a big inning in the afternoon and evening resort fashion parade. Here it becomes sheer and winsome in chiffons and crepes. Pleated nylon nets form wonderful skirts than can go through an entire Caribbean cruise without a serious wrinkle.

The sweater dress—a simple sheath of crepe—with wool cardigan in an identical pastel shade, is another attractive item in the resort lines.

No Woman Has to Settle For the Middle Spread

By Ida Jean Kain

NO WOMAN has to settle for the middle spread at any age. All she needs is a new girdle . . . muscular girdle, that is. Putting the snap back in those bracing muscles can slim off 2 inches, and reduce your size.

What a girdle nature designed! On each side, center-front, are long, narrow muscles which run the full length of the abdomen—their pull is up. An array of broad, flat muscles come in on an angle from the sides—their pull is in. Underneath is a band of muscle for the purpose of flattening. Let this network of muscles go to pot, and the figure spreads—perhaps a whole size. Lacking proper support the internal organs crowd against each other, which interferes with circulation and other bodily functions. And that brings on the middle-aged feeling.

With no more ado, let's be about restoring tone to this important brace of muscles . . . and look and feel young.

Position: Lying on back on floor, knees bent, soles of feet flat on floor. This is a safety position which prevents all strain. To pull shoulders into line, have arms out at sides on floor at shoulder level, elbows bent, forearms back on floor L-shape.

Movement: Contract strongly with the abdominal muscles, pulling snugly up and in. Then lift hips just slightly off floor, holding the up-and-in pull. Lower hips to floor, pull in again, raise hips. Repeat six times . . . later more. Hold it. . . .

Position: Lying on back, legs resting across chair seat with knee-bend at edge of chair, arms down at sides.

Movement: Raise hips off floor to a straight line, flinging arms back on floor overhead. Hold . . . for a half minute. Keep the abdomen as flat as possible, but be careful not to arch small of back. Lower hips, return arms to sides, and rest. Repeat and hold again. The holding does the toning. Gradually increase holding time to two minutes, twice daily. For double action . . .

Position: Lying on back, feet resting on chair seat, hands clasped behind head.

Movement: Contract abdominal muscles by pulling up and in, and press small of back against floor. Holding knees together and keeping stomach muscles strongly contracted, bring both knees up over chest. Then from this position slowly separate the knees, putting the action on the side-front abdominal muscles. Bring knees back together and return feet to chair seat. Repeat six times . . . gradually increasing count. Check these points each time: While flexing knees to chest, be sure to hold them together so the action is on the middle muscles. When separating knees, make the side-front muscles do the work.

REPRESENTATIVE AND MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT
. . . A sprained muscle can't stop him . . .

Miss Joan Toutant Beauregard Will Wed Richard Williams

David E. Finley, director of the National Gallery of Art, and Mrs. Finley announce the engagement of their ward, Miss Joan Douglass Toutant Beauregard, to Richard Pardee Williams 3d.

Miss Beauregard is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Gustave Toutant Beauregard of New Orleans, La., and New York, and the granddaughter of the late Judge and Mrs. Rene Toutant Beauregard of New Orleans, and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Douglass Green of Savannah, Ga. Her great-grandfather was Gen. P. G. T. Beauregard.

The bride-elect, a provisional member of the Junior League of Washington, was graduated from Foxcroft School and Bryn Mawr College.

Mr. Williams, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pardee Williams of Alexandria, Va., is an attorney with the Justice Department. A former Marine Corps lieutenant, he was graduated from Episcopal High School and Yale University, and the University of Virginia Law School.

State of the Union Is Certainly Fashionable

By Marie McNair

PRESIDENT TRUMAN had 'em standing in the aisles yesterday as he delivered his annual "state of the Union" message to the Congress.

Every seat in the gallery was taken and the doors strained at the hinges in the newly decorated House chamber with its panels of blue and white damask with floodlights from the ceiling bringing the whole picture into clear view.

Diplomats took their places on the House floor while their wives filled the diplomatic gallery above. Cabinet wives also looked down from reserved seats in the executive gallery, where notables were a dime a dozen yesterday.

Mrs. Truman, remaining in Independence, was missed from her customary place yesterday. But Mrs. Barkley, wife of the Vice President, and Mr. Barkley's daughter, Mrs. Max Truitt, slipped into back row seats and listened intently during the 50-minute address.

Diplomats' Wives There

IN THE front row of the diplomatic gallery Mme. Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador; Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, and Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, sat together. Behind them were Mme. van Kleffens, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, and Lady Franks, whose husband is the British Ambassador,

Cocoa brown seemed to be the favorite color yesterday. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's frock and hat matched perfectly. Mme. Morgenstierne's cocoa hat sported a feather cockade, and Mme. Bonnet wrapped a black fox stole over her brown frock. Mme. Boheman, wife of the Swedish Ambassador, was in a gray green suit with a scarf of pale yellow satin. Another bright spot of color was the red suit, coral hat and ascot worn by Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the Secretary of the Interior.

Cocoa Brown Again

I SPOTTED Mrs. Hume Wrong of Canada, a symphony in amethyst; Miss Carolina Nabuco, the Brazilian Ambassador's sister, in—yes it was cocoa brown!

Members of the feminine bloc in Congress were scattered throughout the chamber floor. A purple orchid brightened the black frock of Representative Edith Nourse Rogers. Mrs. Cecil Harden, Representative from Indiana, wore a red carnation pinned to her shoulder and Mrs. Katherine St. George was as smart as a mannequin in a black velvet suit with a red throated white orchid fastened to her lapel.

Mrs. Edna Kelly, rookie member of the House from Brooklyn, checked on the President's speech from a typewritten copy held by her neighbor, and Mrs. Frances Bolton of Ohio was in her seat with a rose tinted camellia on her gray tweed suit.

Rush to the Dining Room

THERE was a rush to the Senate dining room by Senate wives when President Truman left the chamber, with luncheon parties mushrooming at every table.

Mrs. Walter George had Mrs. O. Max Gardner as her guest; Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings lunched at a table for two. Mrs. Homer Ferguson was joined by her husband and with them was Mme. Gerda Klein, a visitor here from France, who owns the now famous "Omaha Beach," the landing strip for the European invasion of World War II.

Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper had as their guests Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. George Holmes and Mrs. Edward McK. Hunt. Mrs. Brien McMahon entertained Mrs. Clinton Anderson, and Mrs. Leverett Saltonstal, and Senator and Mrs. William Langer had a table for six.

And before I departed from the scene I ran into Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt hobbling along on crutches with his pretty bride at his side.

Burma Embassy Opened

THE second anniversary of the independence of the Union of Burma was celebrated yesterday at a black tie reception at the Burmese Embassy. Guests were received in the library at 7 p. m. by the Ambassador and Mme. So Nyum.

A buffet supper was served in the candlelit dining room from a table covered with lace and centered with red, white and blue flowers, the colors of Burma. Embassy staff members and their wives assisted in introducing the 200 or more who attended.

Colorful Burmese costumes of longyist and aingyis were topped by the feminine sadone hair-do and masculine gaung baung.

Among those who were invited were the Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Franks, the Ambassador of France and Mme. Bonnet, the Ambassador of India, Mme. Pandit; the Ambassador of the Netherlands and Mme. van Kleffins, and the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Makin.

Benton's Back

Lehman's Office Prettied Up Like A Debutante

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

TWO COMPELLING personalities, familiar to the national political scene, have newly, cozily dug in to Washington. They are Democrat Senators Herbert Lehman and Bill Benton. Both looked rested, in the pink and explained their relaxed state diversely.

"After the first few days of my campaign," said New York's former Governor "I was so tired I didn't know how I'd manage to last eight weeks. But at the end of the campaign I was feeling better than I have for a long time!"

Bill Benton, whose last Capital assignment was Assistant Secretary of State heading public information, achieved similar results an easier way. "I spent a month in Arizona. I slept 9 hours every night, didn't take a drink, didn't eat, and lost 10 pounds!"

Senator Lehman's inner office was prettied with floral offerings worthy of a debutante coming-out reception. Vases and baskets, mostly filled with pink and white blooms, ranged on mantel and window sill. The only other ornament in an otherwise severely workmanlike room was a beautifully detailed model of a sleek yacht. It was given to Mr. Lehman in the early thirties, during his first term as Governor, by a State penitentiary prisoner.

The convict, now freed, but then under long term sentence, ingeniously contrived it from such scraps of material as were available. The Senator is so attached to the toy he brought it along to Washington!

Everybody Calls Him Darling

SENATOR LEHMAN, whom even the most cynical presswomen describe as "a darling," stands behind such practical legalities as oleomargarine repeal, Federal rent control, a broadening of the Social Security Bill, and is strongly in favor of the Taft-Hartley Act. He said "I had a very real thrill when I took my chair in the Senate" and added that he hopes to make a contribution which will justify it. "I hope to make a little news, but as little noise as possible," he grinned.

Senator Benton, whose abstractionist ties used to enchant us, on his first senatorial day disappointingly knotted under his chin a chastely patterned strip of navy blue and gray silk. The Benton inner sanctum was lightened with a sole vase of pink carnations. But there were several added attractions in the outer office where a large and apparently extremely efficient staff were already busied.

The first was a small American flag, its red and white stripes made of hand crocheted lace! The second, an original Thurber drawing given to Connecticut's junior Senator, who also happens to own the Encyclopedia Britannica, by Dr. Robert Hutchins, president of Chicago's University.

The picture's subject matter is entirely appropriate. A group of typically disheveled Thurber folk are at a party. An individual, dressed in somewhat rumpled tie-and-tails, sits apart, alone and abstracted in an armchair. In the near background a lumpy female confides to another: "All he knows is facts."

Chalk It Up to Churchill

IT'S BEEN some time since we've found another gem to add to our collection of Churchilliana. However, one has just turned up. Mr. Churchill, sitting in the House of Commons on the night Sir Stafford Cripps replaced Dalton as Chancellor of the Exchequer, on hearing the news, is reported to have exclaimed: "Cripps! His career and his conscience are chasing each other like squirrels in a cage!"

Nutshell on Formosa Situation?

AROUND TOWN "Formosa" has become almost as familiar as "Bali H'ai." To defend or not to defend is the most hotly discussed dinner topic. A night or so ago the whole Far Eastern situation was nutshelled cleverly by a canny old China-hand who quoted Hilaire Belloc's "Moral Alphabet."

"B" stands for Bear.
When Bears are seen approaching in the distance
Make up your mind 'twixt flight and armed resistance.
I had a friend who stayed to fight
And what became of him?
The bear with ill-concealed delight
Devoured him limb by limb.
Another friend, he ran away.
He ran extremely hard.
The Bear was faster than the man
And beat him by a yard.
Moral: Decisive action in the hour of need
Denotes the hero
But does not succeed!

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Mrs. Stone soon would be going to the hospital to have her third baby. The doctor had told her not long before that 5-year-old George should have his tonsils out, so it seemed the intelligent and efficient thing to arrange for George's operation while she was in the hospital.

But she'd been thinking a good bit about the adjustment of the children to the new baby. George, particularly, seemed to be a bit disturbed at the idea. Mrs. Stone tried to put herself in George's place—a hard thing to do. Nonetheless, she probably got pretty near the truth when she decided that to be sent off to the hospital and not to have mother around when you were feeling miserable would intensify any negative and disturbing feeling Georgie might have about the new baby.

In many situations, the efficient way, the "neat" solution, isn't the best. One needs to take into consideration first and foremost the way individuals involved are likely to feel. In the last analysis, feelings and relationships should have priority over efficiency.

Hotel Buyer Quits Job for Florida Rest

William Ferlaine, Hotel Raleigh purchasing agent, after 25 years of buying items as varied as Christmas ornaments and prime beef, is off for Florida.

Ferlaine

"'Retiring' is too strong a word for a man of 53," he said yesterday. "Just say I'm going to take a rest. I'll probably look around for something to do after a couple of months."

Ferlaine has been with the Hotel Raleigh the past 13 years. Previously he was purchasing agent at the Hotel Van Cleve, Dayton, Ohio, for five years, and the Gibson Hotel in Cincinnati for seven years.

With Manager 25 Years

It was at the Hotel Van Cleve—where Ferlaine became purchasing agent when his predecessor manifested too a great a devotion to the bottle—that he began his quarter-century-long association with Col. Curt C. Schiffeler, the Raleigh's manager.

Ferlaine, a native of Luka on the Dalmatian coast who came to the United States when 17 years old, has been in the hotel business since 1917. He began as a "store room man" issuing food to the cooks at Philadelphia's Bellevue-Stratford.

Being a purchasing agent for a hotel is a life that begins about 6:30 a. m. and may continue until midnight. The job calls for carrying the prices of perhaps a thousand items in one's head, and inspecting orders upon delivery.

Job for Man of Integrity

"It's a job that could be very lucrative for the fellow doing the buying," said Colonel Schiffeler. "It needs a man with a certain integrity and a lot of character."

Asked if he had ever been tempted by unscrupulous persons with merchandise to sell, Ferlaine answered with a laugh, "Lots of times."

"Ferlaine's record is very good," said Schiffeler promptly.

Ferlaine, who is a bachelor and lives at the Hotel Raleigh, is starting out this morning to drive to Florida, "probably to the neighborhood of St. Petersburg or Tampa."

With him he is taking a set of golf clubs presented by his fellow workers in the hotel's Five-Year and Boosters' clubs, and a waterproof wristwatch given by Colonel and Mrs. Schiffeler.

One on the Aisle—

Memorable Voice Boosts Symphony

By Richard L. Coe

ONE OF THE ABLER voices of the American theater will be heard here at next Tuesday's kickoff luncheon for the National Symphony Orchestra's annual sustaining drive.

Throaty, but exact and clear in gentle passages and angry high spots, this memorable voice belongs to Judith Evelyn, who'll junket over from Baltimore where she'll be playing Blanche in "A Streetcar Named Desire" for a two-week run that begins the night before.

Miss Evelyn (as in Eve) is one of those troubled ladies of the theater who's run into part trouble since her three-year run in "Angel Street," which the movies brought out for Miss Bergman as "Gaslight." Judith made such a hit as the nerve-wracked wife in that melodrama that she finally had to give up the part before she too went out of her mind. So Washington didn't see her in that role. Nor, things being as they are, did the Gant Gaither revival of "Craig's Wife," produced especially for her, play our town.

But if you follow the notices in the Nation's far-flung drama pages, you'll know that as the third Blanche of Tennessee Williams' drama, Judith's been a wow. The lady is known as a technician in theater circles, and everyone's mighty pleased that the "Streetcar" part has kept her busy.

The South Dakota lass must have wondered many times between "Angel Street" and "Streetcar" whether she was smart to drop teaching for acting. Raised in Canada, she went to the University of Manitoba, where her thesis on Hauptman and the naturalistic drama is still used in postgraduate German courses. After getting her "master's," she "just happened" to join California's Pasadena Playhouse. This got her firmly interested, a digging-in period in Canadian theatricals followed and the long-run "Angel Street" quickly established her in New York.

Luncheon Seat for Stage Center

All of which Canadian background obscured the fact that she's really a Dakotan, which is one reason the lady asked to help the National Symphony's drive on the level of "out-of-town volunteer worker." She sees our orchestra as something more than simply a community one, and while she's in the neighborhood wants to help talk up the project.

"I'll just be one of many volunteer workers," says Judith, "but since I'll be so close to your theaterless town, I'd like to join forces as one branch of our American culture working for another."

Here's hoping that next time Miss Evelyn is in these parts there'll be a stage spotlight for her, not just a luncheon seat at the Mayflower, however commendable the cause.

"TOBACCO ROAD," acted for the first time by an all-Negro cast, will open a two-week engagement here at the Howard Theater Friday, January 13 . . . This switch on his record-breaker is Producer Jack Kirkland's idea, and after tryouts here and in New Haven, he plans to take it into New York . . . In the cast will be Powell Lindsay as Jeeter, Evelyn Ellis, Jimmy Wright, Helen Dowdy, Dolores Mack and John Tate . . . Evening performances and Saturday and Sunday matinees will be given; seats now at the District Theaters Office, 1212 V st. nw.

TRYOUTS TONIGHT for the Westmoreland Players at the Westmoreland Congregational Church, 1 Westmoreland Circle, at 8 o'clock . . . Director Joan Conner is casting on-stage and off-stage personnel for "The Importance of Being Earnest," for February production.

JOHN ATKINSON'S editorial page letter about this corner's review of "Germany Year Zero" surprised this writer, who thought he'd written a favorable, even original, review, calling the Rossellini picture "a story of the German people as seen through sensitive Italian eyes." . . . My point that this is essentially an Italian view of Germany seemed to be his, too; in so stating I thought I'd been interpretive as well as laudatory.

"ICE-CAPADES" seats are now on sale at the Fairway, 1328 G st., for the 10-day stand opening January 23 . . . Opening night benefits the Washington Wellesley Club, with the committee headed by Mrs. Joseph H. Appel, Woodley 1253.

THE TRANS-LUX switches from "The Pirates of Capri" to a British comedy Saturday, "The Facts of Love," with one of its traditional "previews" of the new with the old on Friday night.

THE MARX BROTHERS, of their foursome days, retake the Little starting Friday with two of their oldies . . . "Horse Feathers" presents Groucho as President Wagstaff of an improbable college . . . "Monkey Business" finds the boys transatlantic stowaways.

RENE CLAIR'S "The Italian Straw Hat" will be shown Friday and Saturday nights at the Institute of Contemporary Arts, 1322 New York ave., at 8:40.

BELASCO NOTE: A meeting will be held here this morning between members of ANTA and officials of the Public Buildings Administration to discuss the bid offered by the American National Theater and Academy for lease of the theater . . . Fingers should be crossed, breaths bated.

STICKING AROUND: Robert Cummings and Rosalind Russell in their comic farce, "Tell It to the Judge," remaining for a second week on the irrational screen of the Unnatural National

Holy Name Priest Heads Theologians

The Rev. Dr. Juniper B. Carol of the community of Holy Name College yesterday was elected president of the American Mariological Society.

The theological organization, concluding its two-day meeting at Catholic University, named the Rev. Dr. Francis J. Connell, dean of the school of theology at the university, as vice president.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph C. Fenton, editor of the Ecclesiastical Review, was named secretary, and the Rev. Dr. Kenneth B. Moore, professor of theology at Carmelite College, treasurer.

Six named to the board of directors were the Rev. Peter Resch, provincial of the Marionists, St. Louis; the Rev. Rachael Huber, professor of theology at Catholic University; the Rev. Dominic Unger, professor of sacred scripture at Capuchin College; the Rev. Urban Mullaney, professor of theology at the Dominican House of Studies; the Rev. Francis Hannigan, professor of theology at the Marist House of Studies, and the Rev. Eugene Gallagher, professor of religion at Georgetown University.

The convention, the first held by the newly organized society, was attended by 65 delegates from all sections of the country.

Dr. Carol, a native of Cuba, received his doctorate from the University of St. Anthony in Rome. He taught at Siena College, Albany, N. Y., before he was assigned to Holy Name College to continue his studies in the field of Mariology, the doctrine of the Virgin Mary as the Mother of the Son of God.

Eyes Held Key In Pregnancy To Baby's Sex

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 4 (AP). A German doctor looked into the eyes of 35 pregnant American women today and tried to forecast the sex of their unborn babies.

Dr. Wilhelm Witzel, of Weisbaden, claims he has solved the age-old riddle of how to tell whether an unborn infant will be a boy or a girl.

"Everything is possible," said an Army doctor, "it might be a hoax, but on the other hand you can tell a lot from looking at a person's eyes."

The 35 women, wives of U. S. military and State Department personnel in Frankfurt, all were in the last month of pregnancy.

The German told Army doctors he had noted the iris of a woman's eyes changes in pregnancy and that different changes take place depending on the sex of the infant.

President Awaits Capitol Invitation To Lunch in Vain

NYHT News Service

President Truman and his staff waited willingly yesterday morning for an invitation to have lunch with congressional leaders after delivery of the State of the Union message, but the invitation never came.

Recalling that last year the President was the luncheon guest of Leslie L. Biffle, secretary of the Senate, after the joint session at which Mr. Truman read his annual message, the White House didn't quite know whether a similar arrangement had been made this time.

Finally, when no invitation had arrived, a tray of food was sent over to the President's office from Blair House, his temporary residence, and he lunched hurriedly at his desk before going to the Capitol.

Mr. Biffle, embarrassed, explained later that it didn't occur to him that the President could spare the time yesterday to eat with his friends in Congress.

Prince in Coma After Overdose Of Sleeping Pills

New York, Jan. 4 (U.P.)—John D. Prince, jr., 58, who tried to take his life when he found his socialite wife dead from an overdose of sleeping pills, was in critical condition today.

Prince, son of a former United States Minister to Denmark and Yugoslavia, was in a coma at French Hospital. He was found unconscious early last night beside his wife's body in their hotel suite.

Police said Prince took too many sleeping pills when he discovered his wife dead. He left a note that said, "There is no point in my carrying on, now that Bea is gone."

Prince owns the Silver Ridge farms in Middlesex County, Virginia.

Rita, Baby Progress While Aly Goes Skiing

Lausanne, Switzerland, Jan. 4 (U.P.). — Rita Hayworth and her week-old daughter, Yasmin, are making excellent progress at Montchoisi Clinic here and should be able to join Prince Aly Khan, now skiing in the Alps, in the next few days, her doctors said today.

The wife of Aly will go to Gstaad and the chalet her husband has rented for the winter season as soon as she is released from the clinic. It is not expected she will be able to ski for some time, however.

Falls Church Closes Deal For School Site

Negotiations for purchase of a site for a new, 120 pupil primary school have been completed, the Falls Church Board of Education was officially informed last night.

Dr. Joseph Seay, chairman of the board's site committee, said that Leonard P. Daniel, owner of the 8.9 acre tract, has agreed to accept the board's offer of $3000 per acre, making the site cost approximately $26,700.

The site is bounded by Oak st., Great Falls st., and Woodland rd., in the Sherwood subdivision. The board has selected Graham & Dickey of Arlington as architects for the four-room structure which will probably be completed by opening of school in September. Total cost, including site, is estimated at $115,000.

Dr. Seay also reported that transfer papers for a 25-acre site for a 500-pupil high school at Leesburg pike and Haycock rd., will probably be signed this week. Price, he said, will be $40,000.

To finance the high school construction, the board authorized Superintendent Schmitt to apply for a $550,000 loan from the State literary fund. This will be part of a $700,000 school construction borrowing program recently authorized by voters of the city.

Also, the board revealed, it expects to spend ultimately $300,000 more in enlarging the new primary school and $500,000 more in enlarging the high school. This became public knowledge when it authorized Schmitt to apply for advances from the Federal Government to pay architects to complete the plans for the schools to their ultimate sizes.

Alexandrian Buys Frederick Gas Firm for $70,000

Ray C. Brehaut of Alexandria, manager of suburban companies of the Washington Gas Light Co., announced yesterday that he has purchased the Frederick (Md.) Gas Co. and plans to expand its facilities.

Brehaut said that to operate the company he will retire from Washington Gas Light, exercising the organization's optional retirement provisions for employes over 55. He will be 58 this month.

Serving Western Maryland and parts of Virginia and West Virginia, the Frederick company is owned by the Potomac-Edison system. Brehaut's purchase, for a reported $70,000 in controlling interest, must be approved by the Maryland Public Service Commission.

Funds Cut Hurts 'Voice' Program, Commission Says

A State Department advisory group told Congress yesterday that Administration economy cuts were handicapping efforts to spread information about the United States overseas.

The five-man United States advisory commission on information submitted a semi-annual report on the State Department's overseas information program which includes the "Voice of America," official shortwave radio.

The budget bureau has "set a ceiling 61 percent below the program's stated needs" for the next fiscal year, the commission said. It noted that estimates for this year were cut in half by the budget bureau and by Congress.

The commission is composed of Mark Ethridge, Louisville Courier-Journal publisher, chairman; and Erwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor; Philip D. Reed, General Electric Co. board chairman; Mark A. May, Yale University, and Justin Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters.

Spanish Treaty Fete Set for Next Week

A special week of study and commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the Treaty of 1750 will be held next week under sponsorship of Dr. Joaquim Coutinho and his students of geopolitics at the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service.

The treaty delimited Spanish and Portugese areas in the Western Hemisphere and agreed that European wars would not be carried to New World colonies.

Protestant Council Selects Best Dozen Pictures of 1949

New York, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—The Protestant Motion Picture Council today named the "best" 12 pictures of 1949.

The council chose one movie for each month of the year, covering the period from December, 1948, through November, 1949. In chronological order they picked:

Rome Opera Singers Threaten to Strike

Rome, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—Opera singers and stage personnel today threatened to strike unless the Rome opera management guaranteed them employment through next spring.

They handed an ultimatum to the management setting Friday as the strike date.

Publisher Dies In California

PALMER PUTNAM
Had been ill four weeks

G. P. Putnam, Noted Author, Publisher, Dies

Trona, Calif., Jan. 4 (U.P.).—George Palmer Putnam, retired publisher, author, explorer and former husband of Aviatrix Amelia Earhart, died today at the age of 62.

The cause of death was not announced, but he had been under treatment for internal hemorrhages and uremic poisoning.

Miss Earhart was his second wife. They were wed in 1931. Six years later she disappeared on a flight over the Pacific.

Putnam, former head of G. P. Putnam Sons, book publishers, was responsible for the publication of Charles A. Lindbergh's book on his solo flight across the Atlantic, paying him $100,000 for the rights to "We."

Putnam's varied career included editing his own newspaper at Bend, Oreg., serving two terms as mayor of the town and serving as secretary to the Governor of Oregon from 1914 to 1917, when he entered the Army.

He also gained distinction as an explorer. He was director of the American Museum of Natural History's expedition to Greenland in 1926, and made an expedition to Baffin Island in the Arctic the following year.

In 1937 he took a cruise to Central and South America. In 1948, he led a jeep expedition 14,200 feet up White Mountain in California, setting a new auto climbing record.

Putnam's first wife was Dorothy Binney, the mother of his two sons David Binney and George Palmer. They were wed in 1911 and divorced in 1928. In 1939 two years after Miss Earhart's disappearance, he married Mrs. Jean-Marie Consigny James, Beverly Hills socialite. They were divorced in 1944. The following year he married Miss Margaret de Haviland, 36, who was at his hospital bedside when he died.

Mrs. Belle Phifer

Mrs. Belle Valentine Phifer, 88, widow of Simon B. Phifer, died Tuesday of pneumonia at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harold E. Benson, 3630 30th st.nw.

Mrs. Phifer

A resident of Washington since 1909, Mrs. Phifer was born near Nevada, Mo. She was active in Red Cross work in both world wars and was a charter member of the Lincoln Road Methodist Church, Lincoln rd. and U st. ne.

Surviving are five children, Mrs. S. Maynard Shawen, Mrs. Paul P. Stone, Mrs. Harold E. Benson, George W. Phifer and Eugene H. Phifer; eight grandchildren, George Henry Phifer, Mrs. Ruth Stone Richmond, Robert H. Benson, Lieut. William D. Benson, Mrs. Mary Benson Johnson, Miss Carol Benson, Eugene H. Phifer, jr., and Miss Carol Anne Phifer; eight great grandchildren, Judy Johnson, Kaye Phifer, Betty Phifer, Anne Richmond, Paul Richmond, Nicholas Benson, Kathy Benson and Richard Huston Benson.

Funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. Robert K. Nevitt of the Lincoln rd. church and Dr. Edward G. Latch of the Metropolitan Methodist Memorial Church at the Hysong Funeral Home, 1300 N st. nw. Friday at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

John J. Sullivan

New York, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—John J. Sullivan, judge of General Sessions Court since 1941, died at St. Clare's Hospital today after an illness of three months. He was 56. He is survived by his wife and two children.

D. C. Group's Chief Clerk May Quit Post

Robert H. Mollohan, chief clerk of the Senate District Committee, has been offered an appointment as United States marshal for the Northern District of West Virginia, and will probably accept it.

This tipoff of possibly another staff shake-up was disclosed last night by reliable Senate sources.

Mollohan

Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) named Mollohan to the locally important committee job last October 19.

He then succeeded A. L. Wheeler, a local Democratic chieftain, who in now on the payroll as acting committee counsel.

Both the counsel and chief clerk jobs pay $10,846 annually.

Acceptance of the West Virginia court custodian post would mean about a $4000 salary cut for Mollohan, but it is understood he is primarily interested in a political career in his native State. He was Senator Neely's manager in the 1948 campaign.

Neely said he hopes to call a meeting of his full committee as soon as possible to settle the staff personnel situation and to map out the session's legislative program.

Mollohan is expected to stay on the committee staff until Neely's announced plans to investigate District mental hospital facilities and the school construction program have been started.

How much of a staff shakeup may take place beyond the chief clerk position will probably remain in the speculative stage until the full District Committee meets, since all personnel changes are subject to majority vote.

Ben-Gurion Wins Confidence Vote On Foreign Policy

Jerusalem, Jan. 4 (AP).—Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's government won a 62-28 vote of confidence from the Knesset (Parliament) tonight—the climax to a three-day debate on Israel's foreign policy.

A report by Ben-Gurion on the recent session of the United Nations which voted for internationalization of Jerusalem set off the debate. A two-hour speech tonight by the Prime Minister closed the argument.

Ben-Gurion told Parliament there was no need of a declaration by Israel making Jerusalem its capital since that was done by King David in Biblical times.

The Prime Minister said the present task of the government was to transfer Israel's legal right to Jerusalem to one of actual possession of the city.

This, he added, was being done.

East German Premier Takes Soviet Holiday

Berlin, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—The Soviet-licensed news agency ADN reported today that Otto Grotewohl, prime minister of the East German Republic, had left Berlin for a vacation at a resort in the Soviet Union.

Grotewohl entered a Soviet military hospital here early last month suffering from bronchial pneumonia. The news agency said he had completely recovered.

Stolen 'Cash Register' May Blow Up Thieves

Los Angeles, Jan. 4 (AP).—Thieves who took a small box resembling a cash register from the Mechanical Research Laboratory may be picking it out of their teeth one of these days.

The box is an instrument used for testing earth strata for underground oil pools. It contains 27 dynamite caps, and if any attempt is made to open it, the box will explode, laboratory officials said.

Wife of Marine Held In China Plans Protest

Chicago, Jan. 4 (U.P.).—The young wife of a Marine held by Chinese Communists said today that she planned to go to Washington next Monday to lodge a protest with State Department officials.

Mrs. Shirley Bender, 25, said she wanted them "to do something" about her husband, M/Sbt. Elmer C. Bender, held since October 19, 1948.

Small Business Aid Planned By D. C. Unit

The American Business Association of Washington last night developed a plan to represent small businessmen's groups throughout the Nation before Congress.

J. A. Kamerow, president, an insurance broker, appointed a three-man committee to work out details of the plan, Arthur Clarendon Smith, William R. Fadler, jr., and Jack Blank.

Kamerow said the association, with William R. Black, publisher of American Small Business, as spokesman, will contact small business associations and "tell their story properly to Congress."

The plan also calls for wide distribution of American Small Business, a magazine, to small business associations as a means of "familiarizing small businessmen with the problems facing them and what can be done in Congress to meet those problems," Kamerow said.

In other actions, the association, meeting at the Sphinx Club, 1315 K st. nw., reaffirmed its indorsement of home rule for the District and planned a dinner to be held at 5 p. m. Sunday, January 29, in the Shoreham Hotel, to honor District and congressional officials who run the city. Main speaker will be Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), chairman of the Senate District Commitee.

Suspect Held In $500 Bond as Finger Bandit

A man charged with poking a finger in the backs of passersby and threatening to "blow" their "brains out" yesterday in Municipal Court was held in $500 bond for a jury trial February 7 on assault charges.

The suspect, Luis Francis Sommers, 49, of 714 C st. se., was arrested by Detective Sergts. R. R. Nichols and H. H. McGuinn after one complainant reported he was approached at 1st and G sts. ne. shortly after 1 p. m. and told to "drop your money or I'll blow your brains out."

The officers said Sommers was pulling similar stunts on other pedestrians when they arrested him.

Jury Indicts D. C. Man, 3 Others in Mail Ad Fraud

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 4 (AP).—An indictment charging four individuals with using the mails in operating a fraudulent advertising scheme was returned by the grand jury in United States District Court today.

This was the last case to be considered by the grand jurors at this term.

Named defendants were Glenn Edward Feeney, whose address was listed as Washington, D. C.; Craig P. Gilbert, Salisbury, N. C.; Andrew A. McIntosh, Charlotte, N. C., and Keen P. Newcomb, Atlanta, Ga.

They were charted with four counts of using the mails in furtherance of their alleged fraud scheme in soliciting advertising for a publication known as The Railway Journal.

Dr. Perkins Seen Heading Maryland Mental Hospitals

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 4 (AP).—Mental hospitals in Maryland will shortly be placed under the one-man rule ordered by the last General Assembly, administration sources said today.

State House insiders say the appointment of Dr. Clifton T. Perkins as commissioner of mental hygiene is a certainty.

Dr. Perkins, now head of the Massachusetts Department of Mental Hygiene, and Governor Lane already have discussed the Maryland post, and Dr. Perkins has said publicly he is considering it "very seriously."

The 1949 General Assembly abolished the old board of mental hygiene and boards of managers of the Spring Grove, Springfield, Crownsville and Eastern Shore hospitals and the Rosewood Training School. A new department was created and power concentrated in a commissioner.

Dr. George H. Preston, head of the department under the old system, resigned last June. Dr. Robert E. Gardner, Springfield superintendent, has been acting commissioner.

Catholic U. Alumni To Discuss Directory

The Washington chapter of the Catholic University Alumni Association will discuss its forthcoming directory of members February 1 at a luncheon meeting in the Burlington Hotel.

The chapter said questionnaires have been sent Catholic University graduates in the Washington area covering dates of attendance, degrees, and present occupation.

Greece Reported Ready For Neighborliness

Lake Success, Jan. 4 (AP).—Secretary-General Trygve Lie said today Greece has informed the United Nations of its willingness to re-establish good relations with Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria.

MEN READ CAREFULLY
Saturday morning at 9 sharp, I want to talk to 20 men who are really ambitious in securing a position that will give them steady employment the year 'round. In other words, there are no laying-off periods, and consistent income is the income that really counts. It doesn't matter what your past employment has been, all we ask is that you be willing to study and learn as we teach you our work. It will also be necessary that you be willing to get along on $75 to $85 per week for the first 4 or 6 weeks while learning our work. A car is essential. You must also be able to give the names of 3 people who will vouch for your honesty and integrity. We prefer men who are married or men who have some measure of responsibility. I would also like to talk to a few men who are mechanically inclined and who know a good thing when they see it. Therefore, if you are honest and of good character, willing worker, neat in appearance, come and talk with me.

Apartment Zoning Tabled In Bethesda

Montgomery County Council last night permitted one application for apartment rezoning in the Bethesda area to be withdrawn without prejudice and heard arguments for and against another similar application.

J. Newton Brewer was permitted to withdraw an application for rezoning from residential A to residential C to build apartments on a 69-acre tract on Rockville pike, at Grosvenor lane. He explained that he preferred to await publication of the master zoning plan being mapped for the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The Council accepted the suggestion of Milton C. White, agent for the White Fathers of Africa, to defer action on their application for rezoning to permit apartments on a tract on Rockville pike at Locuts ave. White said he plans to build 190 garden-type units as an estimated 1½-million-dollar cost if the rezoning is eventually authorized.

Some 75 persons appeared at the meeting in the Bethesda County Building to oppose rezoning to permit apartments on the above land. They maintained that apartments are not needed in the section, which is near the National Institute of Health and the Naval Medical Center and that apartments would strain school facilities.

Napping With His Boots On

Nash to Show Here Model Of $1000 Car

A new prototype car—designed to sell for $1000 if and when it is mass produced—will be displayed here today by the Nash-Kelvinator Corp. The display is part of a "surview" tour of five large cities to determine the demand for the vehicle.

The showing will be at the Mayflower Hotel, for the press and invited guests only. The press showing will start at 1 p. m., and a buffet gathering at noon.

The new car, with only one model produced as yet, and that by hand, would be powered by a foreign-made small engine. With an 18-horsepower Italian motor, it would give 45 to 50 miles per gallon of gasoline and a top speed of 60 to 65 miles per hour.

With a 36-horsepower Fiat engine, it would give 35 to 40 miles per gallon and top speed of 65 to 70 miles. The model already built and to be shown here is a two-door, two passenger convertible. It is 12 feet, 1 inch long; 4 feet, 5 inches high; and 5 feet, 2 inches wide; with an 84-inch wheelbase.

A Nash spokesman said yesterday that the car could not be put in mass production for at least a year.

"It would be manufactured," he said, "only if public opinion clearly shows need, desire and willingness to buy them in sufficient quantity."

Bureau Scientist Elected President Of Optical Society

Dr. William F. Meggers, chief of the spectroscopy section of the National Bureau of Standards, has been elected president of the Optical Society of America.

Chair Soloists Shine in Mozart Piece

By Richard Keith

Last night's subscription concert by the National Symphony Orchestra at Constitution Hall featured four first chair men from the wind section. Appearing as soloists in the rarely heard Sinfonia Concertante in E-flat by Mozart were Marc Lifschey, oboe; Ignatius Gennusa, clarinet; Kenneth Pasmanick, bassoon; and William Klang, horn.

The solo repertoires of these instruments are exceedinply limited and generally of meagre musical worth. Mozart's concertante, however, is a pleasant exception. Although the first movement is commonplace, the adagio and variations are excellent specimens of Mozart's best.

All of the players managed their difficult parts expertly. Lifschey's agile trills and runs contributed their share, while Pasmanick's carefully controlled bassoon tone, so far above the goat bleats often heard from this instrument, provided rich colors. Both Gennusa and Klang had their sensational moments in the spotlight.

Following the Mozart sinfonia, Mitchell led the orchestra in the spirited Four Sea Interludes from Britten's opera, "Peter Grimes."

The composer's talents for drama and color are well illustrated in these four descriptive excerpts. His angular melodies, striding across simple and often dissonant backgrounds, create a constant feeling of tenseness and gravity. Some of his effects are derived from the old French school of impressionism. He relies heavily upon startling splashes from the percussion department.

Last night's performance under the sure hand of the conductor was one of the best this difficult score is likely to have.

The remainder of the program was devoted to the perennial "Scheherazade" Suite by Rimsky-Korsakov.

3 Arlington School Classes Slated For Baptist Church

Three classes of Walter Reed School in Arlington will be held in the First Baptist Church from February until completion of the new Reed wing, expected about August 1, Dr. Barnard Joy, chairman of the Arlington County School Board, said last night.

Joy indicated the classes would be first- and second-graders. He said the alternative would be to transport the overflow students to other schools in other areas.

Joy, addressing the Reed School P-TA, also reported the new junior high school and the new Dominion Hills Elementary School should be completed in September.

Burglars Take Narcotics From 2 Drug Stores

Burglars, believed by police to be narcotic addicts or peddlers, broke into two drug stores early yesterday and obtained quantities of narcotics and other drugs. In another burglary, the thieves took $800 from a liquor store, according

Samuel M. Bialek, of the Medical Arts Pharmacy, 1720 I st. nw., told officers a quantity of codeine and phenobarbital powder was taken from his place. The thieves broke a front door glass, he said. The drugs' money value, he said, was not large.

William O. Green, manager of a Peoples Drug Store at 100 Kennedy st. nw., reported thieves came through a transom and stole "several hundred" morphine tablets. An inventory was in progress yesterday to determine what other drugs may have been taken. A safe containing $2000 was untouched.

The $800 was in paper bags under a counter in the M Street Liquor and Delicatessen Store, 1613 M st. nw. Robert Mudrick, proprietor, said the thieves forced out a small section of a rear door. He said the theft was an "initiation in business" for him as he opened only 10 days ago after the place was remodeled.

Is There a 'Cure' for Suicide?

How the Growing Save-a-Life League Was Born

By Juliet Parker Filler

(Copyright, 1950, by United Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Mrs. Filler is author of the book, "Female Hormones," is the wife of a professor of gynecology and obstetrics at New York University.

CHAPTER FOUR

"IT OFTEN happens that when a well-known person commits suicide, complete strangers are moved to thoughts of doing away with themselves.

So says Miss Lona Bonnell, chief counselor of the Save-a-Life League.

After Carole Landis' suicide in Hollywood, letters from all over the country came to the league with requests for guidance.

A typical letter:

"She was famous; I am nobody. She was beautiful; I am plain. She was rich; I am poor. She lived an exciting life; mine is dull. She sought death; why shouldn't I?"

The league pointed out how warped was such reasoning.

"Each of us, no matter how seemingly lacking in importance to the world, has something which makes us 'ourselves', different from anyone who ever was or ever will be," Miss Bonnell counseled. "Each of us has an individual function to perform in life, to make part of the whole. It may seem that our individual role was not written in the drama of life. But it is there. It is only for us to find it, through prayer and faith, and having found it we can no longer seek death."

How It Was Born

IT WAS BECAUSE a girl discovered, too late, that no human being ever need be without help that the Save-a-Life League was founded in 1906.

The late Rev. Harry M. Warren, then pastor of the Central Park Baptist Church in New York, was called to the bedside of a young woman who had just shot herself.

As she was dying, the clergyman tried to give her the spiritual strength to meet death.

She lay quietly, listening to him. Before she died, she whispered that she would never have taken her life if he had only spoken to her before.

The Reverend Warren tried, until his death in 1940, to prevent other such tragedies. Now his son, Harry M. Warren, is carrying on the work at their New York office, with the effective assistance of a small staff headed by Miss Bonnell, and representatives in Los Angeles, Chicago, Fort Worth, Cincinnati, Dayton, Boston, and St. Petersburg.

No Fee, No Records

AS SOON as the organization hears of an attempt at suicide, a field worker goes to the scene. There is no fee. There is no question of religious background. There are no records to be filled out. The would-be suicide remains anonymous, if he prefers.

If it is necessary, the league gets the help of social agencies which can supply financial, medical, or legal aid. The league itself teaches a philosophy of life which is incompatible with suicide—faith in a Being higher than ourselves and faith in the power of prayer to reach him.

Through the years, the league's work has expanded. Although it is a small organization depending upon individual contributions, the league has helped people from every one of the 48 States.

Many persons write the league for spiritual guidance. Churches, social agencies, people who have themselves been aided by the league, direct unfortunates there. Each letter is individually and immediately answered. The correspondence is kept up as long as aid is required.

From the number of letters of gratitude in the office files, faith in life and living can be communicated through the mails, as well as through personal contact.

Children of a father or mother who has committed suicide are helped in another way. The league has organized camp vacations so that there unlucky little ones can, for a few weeks, erase the memory of the horror of suicide.

During the vacation these children mingle with the other campers and nobody knows why they are there.

For a while they forget the tears and the terrible silence they have recently known at home.

Suicide 'Chain'

"ONE suicide often leads to others," Miss Bonnell said. She gave a compelling illustration of what she meant:

The man in the front room was dead, by hanging. It was not difficult to see the probable cause in the poverty of the room, in the clothing of the dead man's wife and children.

The widow was silent while the league worker offered his help. All he could do was leave his card, urge the woman to call at the league office. He left, but went back in a few hours to try once again to help them.

This time he was sure of what he had only sensed, previously. The widow intended to turn on the gas and kill herself and the children.

Moved by the persistent interest of this stranger, the widow wept and told her story.

The family had come to the city so the husband might find work. He couldn't. Debts accumulated. Rent was unpaid. After the husband's suicide, death for all of them seemed the only way out.

It was a Saturday afternoon. The welfare agencies were closed. The league gave her some money to tide her over the weekend; later went to the social agencies which could give her permanent help.

More important still, the league gave her the spiritual strength to face life. That was more than a year ago. She has kept the courage to meet life rather than seek death, no matter what the future may bring.

That religious faith is a great deterrent to suicide has already been pointed out in the fact that in countries where religion is practically universal, the number of suicides is low.

Tomorrw: The psychiatrists and the churches use the same method of preventing suicide.

I Long To Call You

When I am in this empty room . . . I feel so all-alone . . . And as I linger here I long . . . To lift the telephone . . . I want to call your number and . . . To hear your voice again . . . Your sweet hello and soft good-by . . . That seems to say "Amen" . . . Just like an angel's whisper at . . . The closing of a prayer . . . To take me in your loving arms . . . And keep me in your care . . . But all I ever do is dream . . . And wish that you were here . . . And try to find the fitting words . . .To make my meaning clear . . . I walk around my empty room . . . In silence and alone . . . Without the courage in my heart . . . To lift the telephone.

Makes Cooking Easier, But Mighty Rough On the Cook

NUMBERS GAME

Finding a strange house in the dark usually takes a bit of doing. Many Washington residences don't seem to be numbered at all; those that do bear numbers usually have them hidden in a dark corner, preferably obscured by some foliage.

At Traffic Director George Keneipp's cocktail party the other night, Host Keneipp went to the door to greet two new arrivals. "Ah," he said, "the Mark Lansburghs. Did you have any trouble finding us in the dark?"

"No," came the reply. "You can always tell Keneipp's house by the low license numbers parked outside."

DELAYED ACTION SANTA

Ingrid Wiegers of 7001 Fairfax rd., Bethesda, Md., bought a Christmas gift for a friend in New York, had it wrapped, lettered in the name and address—and then walked off and left the package in a taxi.

How many of us remember which cab we were in, or the driver's number? Ingrid called several taxi companies, called the police, called everybody she could think of—with no result.

While she was hoping that one of her calls would produce a clue, Christmas came and went. So Ingrid reconciled herself to the purchase of another gift, to be accompanied by a letter of explanation.

But just before she embarked for the department stores, the phone rang. Long distance from New York. "Such a lovely gift, and thank you very much." Hmmmm. A novel twist to an old plot.

"The driver of that taxi must have been Santa Claus," says Ingrid. "He bought the stamps and mailed the package for me, and I hope he sees this, so that he'll know how much his thoughtfulness is appreciated."

PUZZLE

I can't quite figure this out.

The Federal Communications Commission gave out with some opinions about FM radio a few years back. The gist of the opinions was that FM was going to revolutionize broadcasting.

Its chief asset was crystal clear tone—full range, no static, no distortion. Besides, the new band opened up acres of "space" in the radio spectrum. Lots of room for thousands of new stations.

So off I rushed to spend a lot of money for a fine new FM set. And I would like to invite the FCC commissioners out to our apartment some Sunday afternoon, to listen to the New York Philharmonic on my receiver.

When I tune in WTOP-FM, I also get WOOK-FM, because the frequencies of the two stations are so close together. WOOK-FM is 95.9 on the dial, WTOP-FM is 96.3, WBUZ-FM is 96.7, and WASH-FM is 97.1. That's four stations within a span of 1.2 points on the dial.

I will concede that two programs at once is a great advance over the old-fashioned system of radio that brought in only one station at a time. It permits a busy man to do twice as much listening.

But it does not enhance the crystal clarity of a symphony, and there are times when I think I'd just as soon do without it.

What I can't understand is: If there's such an all-fired lot of room in the FM band, why do they have to bunch stations together like a litter of snoozing puppies on a frosty night?

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Is it true (as we've been told) that employes of the Securities and Exchange Commission take three or four hours for lunch?

The Johnsons,
3832 Veazey st. nw.

Dear Johnsons:

I have submitted your question to several restaurant operators in the neighborhood. They're unanimous in the opinion that no financial expert can fill a tablecloth full of penciled billions in less than two hours, and that par for the course should be three.

I will make further inquiries among officials at SEC and if I find that the story is true I'll apply for a job forthwith.

Bill.

The Lyons Den

NEW YORK.—Arrangements now are being made for the restoration of Charles Lindbergh's commission in the Reserves. This is the prelude to the campaign for giving him the Republican nomination to the Senate from Connecticut . . . Henry Wallace's dinner guests are served strawberries—and Wallace later tells them that the strawberries they ate were radioactive. "Mrs. Wallace and I eat them all the time," he says . . . Wallace, incidentally, may split the Progressive Party with his speech at the party's convention in Chicago next month. He will discuss the influence of the extreme left wing.

NBC will change the skyline of New York by building a 250-foot television tower atop the Empire State Building. The network will sign contracts with its rivals—WJZ, Dumont, WPIX—permitting them also to use the new tower . . . "Home Town," the new novel by Cleveland Amory, author of "The Proper Bostonians," is dedicated to Martha Hodge, the actress. Miss Hodge is at work on the dramatization of this novel for Broadway . . . Dagmar Godowsky went to three gay New Year's Eve parties. The next day, in describing these parties to her friends, Miss Godowsky said: "The champagne flowed like water used to."

The Shuberts suddenly decided to close "Paragon" in Wilmington. After the opening there, June Lockhart went straight to the newspaper, obtained galley proofs of the hit notice and brought it to John Shubert . . . Ljuba Welitsch, who made a hit at the Metropolitan Opera in "Salome," returns to the United States January 15. She's being secretive about her return . . . Stella Adler, the actress, watched a group of aspiring actresses taking a study course in the theater. When Miss Adler was asked what she thought of this group she said: "They look like the kind of girls who thought that joining the Communist Party would make them pretty."

Christmas Story Ranks With Best

By Drew Pearson

The world has read a lot of great Christmas stories, from Dickens' "Christmas Carol" to Heywood Broun's famous column, but this year we have a Christmas story of doing that ranks with any of them.

PEARSON

It's the story of veterans who have fought our wars, led by the American Legion, who don't want to fight any more wars and do want to build up friendship abroad. Recognizing that wars have come in cycles of about every 20 years, they have gone out to woo Europe's children of today—who can be our best friends or the enemy soldiers of tomorrow.

That's one factor behind the "tide of toys" campaign, by which American children who can spare an extra toy immediately after Christmas are urged to send it, via the American Legion, to less fortunate children in Europe.

There was a time when the public thought of Legionnaires chiefly in connection with rough-housing at annual conventions. But a new sense of international responsibility and determination to play a part in world diplomacy is growing in the Legion today. And that is one reason why Legionnaires, at this, the busiest time of the year, have been cutting short their holidays to promote what amounts to a Friendship Train of toys to Europe.

The Tide Flows

Here is how Legionnaires and the public all over the country are putting across the tide of toys: Gen. Lucius Clay's home town, Marietta, Ga., was one of the first to respond, through Commander John Roy, with a pledge of one boxcar of toys . . . Emperor Hirohito's white horse is being used to collect toys at Nashville, where an admission fee of one toy is being charged to get in to see the famous steed . . . Harry Warner of Warner Brothers, who so patriotically chairmanned the Friendship Train committee, produced a newsreel telling the story of the "Tide of Toys." . . . Thirty Iowa cities responded immediately to the Legion's call, with Des Moines printing special greeting cards for American children to send to European children . . . Mayor Mike Di Salle of Toledo, recently returned from Europe, proclaimed "Tide of Toys" week, while Chairman Frazier Reams arranged for the schools to be open, even during the Christmas holidays, to receive toys.

In Poughkeepsie, N. Y., the Legion used the French Merci Train "40 and 8" boxcar, sent to New York by the people of France, to collect toys. Poughkeepsie Legionnaires have already adopted the town of St. Lo, France, and all toys collected in the Poughkeepsie area will go to St. Lo . . . Special proclamations were issued by Governors Bowles of Connecticut, McMath of Arkansas, Browning of Tennessee, Tuck of Virginia, urging support for the Tide of Toys.

In Los Angeles, Mayor Fletcher Bowron has decreed this week as "Tide of Toys" week, and Chairman Louis Goff of the Los Angeles area has fixed California's goal as "a million toys for a million boys."

Largest Legion post in the world is Omaha's No. 1, with 16,000 members. But Denver's Post No. 1, with 10,400 members and second largest in the world, proclaims it will outcollect Omaha . . . In Merion, Pa., Editor Harold Keating is publishing in his Main Line Times the name of each boy and girl who sends a toy to the children of Europe . . . Wheeling, W. Va., Post No. 1, oldest in the United States, got its drive started so early that even on Christmas morning youngsters set aside a toy from under their Christmas trees . . . In Nashville, Post No. 5 is sending toys to the St. Mary's Orphanage and the Protestant Orphanage for the children to attach notes to and then be forwarded to Europe . . . Letters attached to toys can help to start a chain of friendship letters across the Atlantic.

Merry-Go-Round

When Sherman Minton was a law student, one of his teachers was former President William Howard Taft, and after a heated discussion with Minton, Taft remarked: "Well, that's the law and the only way you will be able to change it is to get on the Supreme Court." Minton is now there . . . The Supreme Court has before it five cases involving the right to picket, of which perhaps the most important is that of John Hughes and Louis Richardson vs. the State of California. Hughes and Richardson picketed one of the Lucky Stores in Richmond.
